FIREMEN ASK SUPPORT FOR BASEBALL TEAM HERE

Appeal Is Presented To Citizens of Cameron For Attendance

The Cameron Fire Department is a volunteer unit, as you probably know, its services being rendered solely for honor and loyal citizenship to the Friendly City of Cameron. The firemen receive no remuneration whatever for their services, but on the contrary, members are required to pay annual dues, just to risk their lives and limbs to keep fires in Cameron at a minimum.

There is very little social activity connected with this organization, but this year, the Cameron Volunteer Firemen are sponsoring a baseball team and are using a number of their young men members. Thus far in the season, the Firemen have made a wonderful showing. The purpose of this article is not to ask for donations since the team is already organized and equipped for action by the local fire department. The real purpose of this article is to put before the citizens of Cameron the fact that they have never seen the time when the firemen failed to respond to an emergency call. They have performed their duty night and day, summer and winter. The firemen feel that the citizens of Cameron are not showing appreciation of the fire team when they fail to support the baseball team sponsored by the organization.

In a recent game with the Waco Gassers, at which time the Firemen defeated their opponents by a score of 3 to 2, a mere handful of Cameron citizens were present to assist the boys in their activity. It seems that the fire-fighting services rendered to Cameron should merit creditable patronage. The team is striving hard to win its games and success can be bought only by local home support. The recent game here was well worth seeing, in fact as good as any league game. Certainly, the price did not stand in the way. From the standpoint taken by the fireboys of the team, the citizens of Cameron must not appreciate this part of their city government.

Did you notice a short time ago the fifteen per cent reduction in fire insurance rates for Cameron? Did you stop to think who was directly responsible for this? The fire boys had much to do with it. They hold the fire losses here to a minimum.

Do any other citizens of Cameron perform duties for Cameron people without pay, never knowing at what time, life or limb may be lost?

Yet when the fire boys try to have a ball club, only about fourteen citizens turn out to support them. It costs each of these the immense sum of twenty-five cents to enjoy a game. What if there were no volunteer firemen in Cameron? Have you ever stopped to figure how many thousands of dollars would have to be expended annually to pay for these men to risk their lives, as Cameron firemen are now doing voluntarily? Surely we can get mere citizens of Cameron to turn out for ball games. This is the only social activity these boys have to remunerate them for their volunteer services in answering the fire alarm. Certainly you should be willing to see some of these games, and we believe that you will do so. Watch for the dates of future games in Cameron and show the boys your appreciation.

Wm. R. Rogers To Temple Thursday For Treatment To Eye

Wm. R. Rogers left Cameron at noon Thursday for Temple in company with Giles L. Avriett and Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Chas. McDermott where treatment will be made for an injury sustained Wednesday morning to his right eye.

Mr. Rogers was clipping a strand of wire at his home when a portion of it struck the ball of his right eye. At first it was feared he might lose the sight but it later developed that the pupil was not touched, according to the diagnosis at that time.

Thursday morning Mr. Rogers was advised by physicians to go at once to Temple for an examination. Fear that permanent injury may have been sustained was expressed again on Thursday.

Christian leaders and workers numbering twenty strong and representing a territory comprising some 200 churches of District 15, Baptist State Convention, met at the First Baptist church on Tuesday morning. This group, presided over by Dr. J. L. STRYCHNINE FATAL TO YOUTH HERE

W. D. Blancett, Jr., 19, died Saturday night, April 18,1931 within a short time after he is said to have taken strychnine.

The young man, recently coming to Cameron from Hillsboro to accept employment at the Humble Station operated by R. C. Moody is said to have taken the poison in the presence of others at an address on North Fannin Street about 7:30 o'clock.

He obtained the poison at a local drug store and is said to have signed for it with the representation that he would kill some rats.

The quantity of strychnine taken, it was declared by authorities, was sufficient to produce death of 198 people. No statements were made by the youth other than that he wished to die.

After it became known that he had taken the poison he was rushed to the Cameron hospital where physicians sought to save his life. He died within a short time after reaching the hospital.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Blancett of Hillsboro. Funeral services were held there Sunday afternoon at the First Baptist church conducted by Rev. Kirkland. The body was taken to Hillsboro by the Green Brothers undertaking firm. Interment was made in the cemetery at Hillsboro.

The youth is survived by his parents, three sisters and three brothers.

New Name Is Given Baseball Team Here

In the beginning of the baseball season here the Cameron Fire Department expressed their willingness to sponsor the club for the current year and so made a donation of $50 to start the team off. As a matter of appreciation the name has been changed from the Cameron Comets to the Cameron Firemen. Hereafter they will be referred to as such.

The strongest team to represent this city in years is being welded at this time and a personal of their roster will convince the fan of this fact. Herewith is the present list of players: Vaughn Jenness, Manager; Archie Peel, William Worcester, Ray Walston, R. Keith, Ralph Wiley, D. Threatt, Sam McDermott, Prothro Deer, Douglas Williams, Kenneth Keith, Henderson Walker, George Miller, Elmo Baggett, Earl Thompson and H. Threatt.

The Methodist people of the community are getting ready for a delightful occasion which they term a 'Church Night.' They will gather in the basement of the church Friday evening (April 24) at eight o'clock and for two hours 'mix and mingle as only Christian people can do it. Committees have been appointed and are busily at work to decorate the basement appropriately, to offer an appropriate program (informal) and to serve refreshments. It is desired and expected that every man, woman or child who calls himself a Methodist, will be in attendance and if any one of them is married to a Baptist Presbyterian, Episcopaljan, Disciple or any one else, such a one is considered a Methodist on that evening and is just as welcome as the thoroughbreds. Let every Methodist who reads this invite every other Methodist to be present and then be sure to come.

The Committee.

P. S.—The only reason why we are confining ourselves to the Methodists this time is because we haven't room for others. And let the wary know that there will not be a collection for anything that night.

MARLIN DISTRICT ORGANIZATIONS IN CONVENTION HERE MAY 3

Representatives of all young people's organizations in each local church in the Marlin District are called to meet in a District Set-Up Meeting at Cameron, Texas on Sunday afternoon, May 3, 1931, according to officials of the Methodist church having charge of district work of this church. It is purposed to take up at that time plans of reorganization of the educational features of the church's program as they affect the young people in each local church. This re-organization is the result of a vastly changed plan of Christian Education in each local Methodist church as authorized at the last session of the General Conference of this church held in Dallas, Texas, during May, 1930 and affects all the departments of each church pertaining to young people's activities. Among these groups included in this change of program are both Epworth Leagues, Young People's Sunday School organizations, Young Peoples Missionary Societies and any other organizations of young people in the local church. Every church is urged to have capable representative at this meeting in order that all may understand the new program, and be able to move towards its effectiveness in each local church.

Miss Billie Gaither, the Sunday school pianist will be at the organ; we hope to make it a most delightful and profitable hour. At the close a free-will offering will be taken for the general Sunday school work of the Texas Conference. The Sunday school will begin at 9:45 a. m. and have its regular work; for once every member of the school is expected to remain for the eleven o'clock hour. Let mothers so instruct their children. The subject of the sermon at the 7:45 p. m. hour will be 'The Banishment of Fear.' CASTORIA

The Kind You Have Always Bought, and which has been in use for over thirty years, has borne the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher on the wrapper all these years just to protect the coming generations. Do not be deceived. All Counterfeits, Imitations and "Just-as-good" are but Experiments that trifle with and endanger the health of Infants and Children—Experience against Experiment.

Never attempt to relieve your baby with a remedy that you would use for yourself.

New Handy Cash Policies

Handy Cash Policies pay $350.00 in event of a natural death and $500.00 in event of accidental death.

Attached to each policy is a draft for $250.00 which can be cashed at any bank immediately.

Handy Cash Policies are standard life insurance contracts, being issued on the ordinary life plan (age 10 to 65) and the twenty pay life plan (age one day to 60 years). Like all standard contracts, Handy Cash Policies carry 'cash' and paid up options. These values increase each year and serve as a sinking fund for any emergency.

Handy Cash Policies provide that the premium deposit shall be made annually in advance. On the ordinary life plan at age of 10 the annual premium is $5.03. This premium remains the same thruout the life of the contract.

The cost of one of these little, new copyrighted Handy Cash Policies is so pitifully small that no member of any family can sensibly afford to be without one to meet emergency in case of death.

This copyrighted Handy Cash Policy is designed specifically for the purpose of providing ready cash with which to meet the many expenses that accompany the closing of life's last chapter.

CAMERON COMETS LOSE NIGHT GAME TO WACO

CRIPPLED TEAM MAKES GOOD SHOWING BUT LOSES 6 TO 8

By SUNNY POPE

When time to start play at the ball game at the Katy Park in Waco Thursday it was found several of the Comets had not shown up to participate so it was necessary to draft recruits from the Cameon visitors who were hustled into uniforms and the game was played under this handicap.

The Comets met defeat at the hands of the Waco Packers 8 to 6 in an abbreviated game. This was the first time some of the Comet line up had ever so much as seen night baseball. To add to the misfortunes most of the Comets were not uniformed until after the hour set for the start which was 8 p. m.

At that though the makeshift Comets threw several scares into the Packers. For the first inning Wilson walked. Thompson got a hit placing Wilson on second. Peel then poled out a long double to the outfield scoring Wilson and Thompson. In attempting to stretch the hit into a three bagger Peel was thrown out at third.

The Packers knotted the score in their first time at bat by getting 2 runs on one hit and an error. In the second inning the Packers scored five runs on four errors. Then in the fifth the Packers obtained the only score they deserved but even this was a gift run as Peel gave a base on balls to an opponent as the bases were loaded.

The Comets out hit the Packers nine to seven and also led in errors making nine to Waco's three.

Doubtless Peel would have won handily had the Comet lineup been on the field. As it was he fanned ten of the thirty-fourmen who faced him during the game. However at times he grew wild as he gave five bases onballs.

Jenness and Peel batted at a .590 clip while Baggett and Kirk were piling up a .333 average with the hickory.

Considering the handicap the Comets did remarkably well to hold the Packers as well as they did, as the Waco team is considered one of the strongest amateur teams in the state.

YOE HIGH DEFEATS HOLLAND 7 TO 5

WORCESTER PITCHES LOCAL TEAM TO VICTORY IN GAME FRIDAY

By SUNNY POPE

On Friday afternoon the Yoe high team took on the Holland high boys who had won the Bell county championship, and won a very decisive battle seven to five. Four of the Yoe high lads were especially vicious in the attack, namely Wiley, Williams, Miller and Worcester. These four were the main contributors to the runs batted in but Tucker deserves especial mention as the box score shows he got only one hit in three official times at bat but he scored two of the Yoe high runs.

Worcester weakened in the sixth allowing three scores to be made on four hits and an error. Again in the next frame the visitors scored two runs on two hits coupled with an error.

Wiley assumed the hurling assignment and for the two innings only one Hollander reached first base and this because of an error.

The Holland boys played errorless ball but seemed powerless to hit when hits meant runs. The Yoe high boys are charged with five errors though not of the costly vaiety.

In the third inning Worcester drove a home run over the left field barrier as Miller stood on first having reached there on a fielder's choice. Dump Wiley made three hits, two of which were two baggers. Worcester also got a two bagger in the eighth.

The Yoe high next year should be up with the leaders in Texas if they continue to improve as they have and we freely predict they will make a bid for next year's pennant in their class.

In their last time at bat the Yoe high went out in one, two, three order. The Waco boys outhit the Cameron boys twelve to six. In the error column the local team made five miscues whereas the Waco boys were charged with three. Brooks proved to be a star of the game getting two two-baggers and a single in four times up. JAKE RICHARDS, JR.

Jake Richards, Jr., the eight month old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Richards in Cameron, died Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock after a few days illness of whooping cough and pneumonia.

Services were held at North Elm church Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock by Rev. N. D. Timmeman, pastor of the First Baptist church here and interment was made in North Elm cemetery, Green Brothers in charge of arrangements.

JOHN DOWTY

John Dowty, 67, died suddenly at the home of N. Y. Hayes in the Marlow community Monday night, April 20, 1931.

Funeral services for deceased were conducted on the afternoon of April 21 by Rev. C. A. Lehmberg, pastor of the First Methodist church in Cameron with interment in Marlow cemetery.

He had been a resident of the Hayes home for a number of years where he had worked for many years. His wife preceded him in death about 11 years ago. The only survivors of the family is a step daughter, Mrs Annie Evard of Cameron.

SUNNY'S SIDE

A few caoms on the Firemen-Waco Gasser Game.

When any pitcher can hold the lineup the Firemen presented Sunday to the twenty-first man before a hit is registered off of his delivery deserves especial mention. Taking the line up that faced L. Phillips they present a .333 per cent batting average in amateur baseball anywhere.

Peel is the only man to register two hits during the game. One was a single and the other a two bagger against the left field wall missing a home run by inches.

In one respect the most remarkable game ever witnessed in Cameron in that the first baseman accounts for 16 put outs and Peel accounted for 10 by the strike out route.

The Firemen earned only one run in the game which was the winning one. Neither of their runs were made without a contributing error.

The Firemen are allowed twenty men on their roster during their playing season. Elsewhere in Sunny's Side will be found a list of players so far certified. Others may or may not be added, this being discretionary with the manager.

Had it not been for Doug's timely two bagger in the ninth the Firemen would have had an excellent chance of carrying home in their satchel a well deserved victory and one they would have had reason to brag over.

Sunny is figuring, at this early date, on the game with the prisoners at Huntsville. We wish to make this trip to within the prison walls again this year and many who failed to make the trip last year have expressed their determination to be in the caravan this year.

Last year when we went to Huntsville the Cameron fans and players alike showed such good sportsmanship that the prison team as a whole voted for a return game with the Firemen for this year. Those of you who made the trip last year can vouch for the splendid picnic which we all enjoyed and the hospitable treatment we were accorded.

Who wants to go this year? Write Sunny.

Odd New Zealand Bird, Kiwi, Nears Extinction

The strangest bird in the world—the kiwi-kiwi, is described as follows in Boys' Life, the Boy Scout publication.

"Native of New Zealand, he nearly makes fact of ancient fable—current when the continent was first discovered—that everything around Australia was upside down. The kiwi is practically wingless and completely flightless. He has no visible tail. His brownish plumage, moreover, because the feather-filaments are disunited, looks more like coarse hair. His nostrils, unlike any other bird's, are at the very tip of the long beak, that is flexible and very sensitive to touch.

"The kiwi growls like a dog, and snaps his bill as you crack your fingers; he can hiss like a cat when angry. His extraordinarily powerful legs can give mighty kicks, not backward but forward, and have been known to break a bone in a man's hand. In small flocks, the few kiwis left of a disappearing species inhabit New Zealand's hilly forests. Females burrow long tunnels, laying in a nest at the very end of it two large eggs—eggs a quarter the length of the whole bird. Incubating is entirely the job of the male.

"Maoris are very fond of kiwi flesh broiled or roasted, so fond that the bird was well hunted out before ever a white man saw one. Now the peculiar bird, distant relative of ostrich, emu, cassowary, and survivor of a species that flourished with the extinct, gigantic dinornis and fierce, sluggish moas, millions of years ago, is fast approaching extinction."

Marriage Promise Just Incident of Vacation?

A New Yorker, lifted out of his habitual caution by the balmy atmosphere of Florida during a winter vacation, brought suit against a girl he met down there, to recover a ring. The young lady contested the suit.

When it came up in court, the young man said that they had enjoyed a fond good-by on the beach, but later, when both had returned to New York, the girl had passed him up cold. The girl herself admitted it, saying:

"I really didn't know whether I should recognize him or not. Our acquaintance in Florida was really very slight."

"But," expostulated the court, glancing at the sparkling ring, "you promised to marry him, didn't you?"

"Why, yes," admitted the girl, "but that was all."—Los Angeles Times.

Europe's "Holy Alliance"

The Holy Alliance was the name of a league formed by Russia, Austria and Prussia after the fall of Napoleon in 1815 for the purpose of regulating the affairs of Europe "by the principles of Christian charity," says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. Notwithstanding its professed purpose the real policy of the Holy Alliance was to make every endeavor possible to stabilize existing dynasties and to resist all change. The league endured until 1830 and was in time joined by all the important and European monarchs except those of England and Turkey. The Monroe Doctrine was enunciated largely to warn the Holy Alliance not to interfere with the newly established republics in Latin America.

Biblical Flowers

There are comparatively few flowers named in the Bible. It is reported that as a whole the Syrian people were not particularly fond of flowers. Among those named are the myrtle, Isaiah, 4:13; Rose of Sharon, Isaiah, 35:1; Song of Solomon, 2:1; lily, I Kings, 7:26; Son of Solomon, 2:16, 6:23; Matthew, 6. Flax is found in Exodus, Genesis, Leviticus, Esther, Judges, Proverbs and Kings. Burning bush (or acacia) is mentioned in Exodus, 3:4. The lily is an Arabic general term and applies to the tulip, ranuculus, narcissus, iris, water lily, and particularly the anemones which carpet the ground during the summer season throughout Palestine.

Treasure Trove on Farm

On the land of a widow farmer of Aarhus (Denmark) 6,000 copper and silver coins of the days of Eric Glipping (1259-1286), king of Denmark, were found. It was in the reign of this king that the first rigsdag, or general assembly, became an established legislature in Denmark. The coins, as treasure trove, were by law the property of the state, but the widow received a sum of money in exchange.

Only Daddy

Elizabeth Ann's mother was telling the little girl and her small brother the story of Cinderella. Suddenly there came a knock from the front door.

"Go see who's there," said her mother. "Maybe it's the fairy prince."

Big Business

John, age eight, had just been promoted to 3A. One day when he came home he was telling his mother about their new organization; that they had elected a president, vice president and such. Mother asked what the object of the organization was and after a moment John replied:

"To promote better citizenship."

VENTRICE COKER

Ventrice Coker, 8 months of age daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Coker of Ben Arnold, died at the home of Ellis Coker on April 16. Funeral services were held on the following day in the Baptist church in Ben Arnold at 4:30 p. m., with interment in Ben Arnold cemetery, Green Brothers of Cameron directing the arrangements and Rev. Almost Succeeded in "Cheating the Hangman"

The phrase "Cheat the hangman" appears to have had originally a positive significance rather than to have been applied to the mere accident of being cut down prematurely. In 1693 a man named Richard Johnson was hanged at Shrewsbury. He hung for half an hour and still showed signs of life, so the hangman went up to see what was the matter. Noticing two hooks at the back of Johnson's neck, he took him down, pulled off his shirt, and discovered that the hooks were secured by a rope wound around and under the culprit's body, the whole device taking the strain off his neck. The ropes were cut off and he was put up again, when the job was effectively completed. Johnson had previously applied to the undersheriff for the privilege of being buried in his full garb, and if he had concealed the hooks properly and been more adept in simulation he would no doubt have lived to tell the tale. The records convey the impression that tricks of this kind were not new, and that the hangman assumed a knowing or frankly suspicious look when he went forward to investigate. — Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Odd Pledges Accepted by Spanish Pawnshop

Pawnshops are often amazingly interesting places—especially when you happen to be hard up. And the most curious of all of them is probably one in Barcelona, Spain, where birds and animals are accepted as pledges. Bears, camels, horses and dogs are accepted by this unique "uncle" as a matter of course. The chief patrons are circus proprietors. One polar bear who was handed, so to speak, over the counter by his needy owner proved to have an appetite more remarkable than that of any small boy at a Christmas party. His owner could not redeem him, and other circus proprietors who visited the shop in search of four-footed "turns" were apparently aware of his fame as an eater, for no purchaser could be found for him. At last he had to be killed, lest his food bill ruin the business. A woman snake charmer recently gave into the care of 'uncle" a collection of performing snakes! She needed money to return to her native country. A few months later, however, she succeeded in redeeming her pets from their temporary home.

Tourists for 300 Years

Delft in the Eighteenth century was celebrated for its pottery and porcelain—this repute has gone, although there is a modern cheaper Delft ware which gets some honor from the past. The modern tourist hardly notices it when he finds this really delightful old Dutch city. He is more apt to be led by his guide to see the Prinsenhof on the Oude Delft, where the great William of Orange was killed in 1584, by his murderer Gerhard, or to see the tomb of Admiral Tromp in the Oude Kerk, for he was the victor of 32 naval battles, including the defeat of the English fleet. Grotius, the first international lawyer, also lies here. The Dutch consider it one of their most interesting places and for 300 years it has received tourists who praise it.

Not by Bread Alone

Man cannot live by bread alone. He hungers and thirsts after knowledge. He pushes the boundaries of his mind's dominion to the frontiers of the cosmos. The distances between the stars exist in his mental measurements. Can one imagine physical air waves accidentally falling together into Beethoven's "Fifth Symphony," or physical type fortuitously arranging itself into Shelley's "Ode to the West Wind," or stones carving themselves and falling together into the cathedral of Amiens? There is a plus quality in such things that overpasses all materialistic needs and that materialism never can explain.—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Divisions of Orient

Japan, China and the other countries on or near the eastern coast of Asia comprise the geographical region known as the Far East. "The Orient" is a more general term and includes all countries in Asia east of the Mediterranean. "Near East" is applied to Turkey in Europe, Asia Minor, Armenia, Georgia, Azerbaijan, Persia, Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia, Arabia and Egypt. Thus it will be seen that the Near East and the Far East in a general way consist of divisions of the Orient.

Ancient Rhodesian Foundry

An ancient iron foundry, buried six feet in a cavern, has been dug up by the Italian expedition which is searching for traces of prehistoric man near the Livingstone rocks in Rhodesia. Here 3,000 or 4,000 years ago a superior, intellectual race smelted iron by primitive methods, such as are now known to the Bantu people. The discovery indicates the great age of the Zimbabwe and other Rhodesian stone ruins, and throws new light on the history of metallurgy.

PEEL WINS PITCHERS BATTLE HERE SUNDAY

COMETS TAKE GAME FROM THE WACO GASSERS BY SCORE OF 3 TO 2

By SUNNY POPE

What proved to be an old fashioned pitchers duel was won Sunday afternoon when Cameron defeated the Waco Gassers three to two, though it required ten innings to turn the trick. Peel was on the mound for the locals while T. Phillips hurled for the opponents. In points of affectiveness Peel proved the better as during his ten innings he fanned ten opponents and walked none while Phillips whiffed six and walked five. The Gassers put over the first score of the game in the second when two hits and an overthrow by Jenness let in one run. In the sixth an error by Williams gave the opponents pitcher a lease on first. He went to second on an infield out and scored on Baker's two bagger. This proved to be the end of their run making. Then came the ninth inning, Jenness, first up got on first on an infield error. Walker then forced Jenness at second. Wiley singled putting Walker on second. McDermott got on first on the second baseman's error. Vogelsang flew out to center. With the bases loaded and two out Williams singled over third scoring the two runs needed to tie the scores. Williams stopped at second on the throw in. Keith walked. Threatt fanned for the third out.

In Waco's time at bat Bennett was out Keith to McDermott. Carroll, hitting for Zoock singled. T. Phillips fanned and L. Phillips popped out to Wiley.

Peel, first up in the ninth dry cracked one against the left field fence barely missed clearing the wall which was scored a two bagger. Jenness flew out to center. Walker met one of Mr. Phillips slants through the box and out into center field scoring Peel. In the matter of hits Peel got the first Cameron hit in the sixth. In the next inning Baggett got one. Wiley and Williams got one each in the ninth and in the tenth Peel's two bagger and Walkers single were all the hits made.

The Cameron lineup is undoubtedly much stronger than last year and we freely predict they will make it tough sledding for the opposition this year.

Self-Revelation

Perhaps the most withering and wittiest rejoinder ever made on a political platform, thinks Sir Ian Malcolm, writing in his reminiscences, "Trodden Ways," was that made by Joseph H. Choate during an election campaign in New York. Following a speech by "Boss" Croker—who rarely spoke in public—in which he had "completely given away his case," in the judgment of his opponents, Mr. Choate gravely said:

"Now, consider the case of Balaam's ass; before it spoke all men regarded it as quite an ordinary quadruped; but after it had spoken they discovered what an extraordinary ass it was."—Kansas City Star.

British Flag a Mixture

The Union Jack of Great Britain is composed of three crosses, representing England, Scotland and Ireland. The cross of St. George for England is a broad, upright Latin cross, red on a white ground; the cross of St. Andrew for Scotland is a saltire or X-shaped, white on a blue ground; the cross of St. Patrick for Ireland is a red saltire on a white ground. When the union of the two crowns of England and Scotland took place upon the occasion of James VI of Scotland to the English throne as James I, the flags of England and Scotland were united. The union flag as it is now flown did not appear until 1801.

Wise Reader Will Not Spoil Joy in New Book

One should read a book in the way he goes through a strange town in his car, Charles E. Tracewell writes, in the Washington Star. He does not stop the vehicle at the court house, and launch forth into a public denunciation of the architect who created the structure.

He does not assemble a gathering of the natives in the square and proceed to tell them that the traffic regulations of their one-horse town are vile, their streets badly in need of repair and their mayor evidently a sap of the first water.

No, he does nothing of the kind. He may see all these things and he may want to be so assertive, but the chances are exactly 100 to nothing that he will merely keep his eyes and ears wide open, be interested in everything he sees and hears and go on about his business, that of getting out of town to the next one.

Reading a new book is somewhat similar. A book is a journey, which, once taken, can never be taken again in its exhilarating newness, its pristine colors, its excitement, its vividness, its commonplace drama.

No matter how fine a book may be, or how much one may enjoy its second reading, or its third or fourth reading, there can never be but one first time with it, and, this being true one is a fool to spoil it by talking or snoring, or fuming, in his own behalf.

Native Irish Costumes Before Queen Elizabeth

Writing of the native costume of Ireland in the early days, "Costume Throughout the Ages" says: "Since Elizabethan days the dress of the Irish has had little to distinguish it from that worn in England, but before the time of that queen (who, like Henry III, made many laws pertaining to the clothing of her subjects, Irishmen wore kilts similar to those of the Scotch man, accompanied by leggings laced in by string tipped with bronze, shoes of brown leather, and a pleated linen shirt. Over all was a sleeveless loose cloak that was long and made of bright-colored wool. Some wore a fitted coat, much like the present-day frock coat with tight sleeves, no collar, and a broad girdle at the waist . . . The women wore a linen undergarment and over this long gowns of the same material, dyed saffron, or a costly fabric imported from the continent. Their long capes had hoods attached. In jewelry, they wore bracelets, pins, brooches, rings, and torques about their necks. Today, modern Continental dress is found in all parts of Ireland, all traces of the old dress having disappeared."

Tribe of Smiling People

The Samoans are a happy race. They are smiling all the time except when they are laughing and it takes very little to make them laugh. A large group of native stevedores toiling under the torrid sun were thrown into convulsions by the sight of a tractor which they were taking from the hold. They concluded it was some new kind of an automobile with a single seat. The Samoan has little or nothing to worry him and hence his jovial disposition. His food grows all about him and his clothing demands are quite limited. A clean garment of bright colors and some cheap jewelry make a well-dressed woman and the young children wear no clothes at all. There are many short and sudden showers, but as a rule the climate is warm and sunny and the temperament of the people seems to be the same.

Glaciers and Electricity

Changing sizes of glaciers are of practical as well as scientific importance, and hence for many years elaborate measurements have been made of them, partly under government auspices, says Nature Magazine. There is an international glacier commission, founded in 1894, which collects such measurements from all countries and publishes them every year. The Swiss government is especially interested in watching the variations of glaciers, because they affect the flow of the mountain streams upon which Switzerland depends for generating electricity. Systematic observations of glaciers are also valuable as a means of anticipating disastrous avalanches and floods.

Ancient Pewter

What is believed to be the oldest piece of pewter in existence is on exhibition at Field museum in Chicago. It is an inscribed tablet bearing in Chinese a date indicating the year A. D. 85. It was found in a tomb in Lo-Yang, province of Honan, China. This pewter is a relic of the Han dynasty and is executed as a deed, or grant of land, for the burial place of the governor of Tungkun, who was a great scholar highly esteemed by his contemporaries, according to Dr. Berthold Laufer, curator of anthropology.

You Win

A Connecticut citizen, who has played anagrams for a "good spell," writes wrathfully to the Wall Street Journal that he was cheated out of the county anagram championship by the ignorance of the judge, who holds down the lexicographer's easy chair at "the Corners" general store. "He claimed," fumes the correspondent, "there is no such word as 'niety'; I say there is. Am I right?" "Absolutely, old sport," assures the editor. "A 'niety' is a Polish coin, designed, no doubt, for slot machines."

Football Player Pays Price for Popularity?

The football hero has his price to pay. Either he faces a life of continual strenuous exercise or a breakdown from the lack of exercise, as shown by Dr. Henry Pleasants, Jr., in Hygeia Magazine.

Football is a grand game, says Doctor Pleasants, but a player cannot keep it up for the rest of his life. The biggest and huskiest men are beaten into the finest physical condition in the shortest possible time. Every year they go through this periodic grind and muscles are developed that they cannot keep in condition unless they become piano movers when they are out of school.

A certain number are fortunate enough to gain a taste for tennis or golf; others go into professional football, and a few become coaches. But a vast number go into indoor jobs that a one-legged, cave-chested, 100 pound, sixty-year-old clerk could do.

When an athlete or an active man becomes sedentary, every cell in his body becomes flabby and the body fluids are filled with poisons accumulated from the unused muscles. The heart has grown from the exercise and like the other muscles, it becomes flabby and accumulates poisons.

"DEVIL TO PAY"

By

FREDERICK LONSDALE

CHAPTER FOUR

Willie was sitting in his room chewing a pen and swearing. He had never been much at this correspondence business, and the torn paper which littered the desk and the floor showed that he was now beginning about the seventeenth draft of the note to Mary Grayle.

'George,' he said to the terrior which was watching him solemnly, 'How would you tell a nice girl you didn't like her any more? Never did such a thing in your life? Well, neither have I. But it's got to be done, old feller. Dorothy expects every man to do his duty, sir.'

'Dearest Mary' he wrote, and then considered it. "Too affectionate,' he said and added that sheet to the collection on the floor. 'George, you're no more help than a human being.' George barked nervously and jumped up on the window-sill, looking eagerly out of the window. As a matter of fact he was interested in the nondescript individual who was loafing on the sidewalk opposite, but Willie took it for a suggestion.

'Great work,' he said, scratching George's ears, 'Why not?' Go and meet her accidentally in the street. Nothing wrong with it. Apt to happen to anybody.'

He flung down the pen and galloped down stairs. Once again his ability to make quick decisions was getting him into trouble without necessary delay. For, as he left the house and started briskly down the street, the nondescript individual turned and followed along, some 30 yards behind. It was not the first time that Mr. Hope had had occasion to make use of Masterton's Private Detective Agency.

He was just in time to see the crowds pouring out of the Empress Theatre after the matinee. He posted himself outside a shop-window some fifty yards away from the stage door and when Mary appeared, going to her car, he almost bumped into her. He would have, in fact, if he had not bumped into the nondescript individual instead.

'Willie dear, she cried, 'what a devine surprise. Jump in. We'll have tea at my place.'

'Can't,' said Willie. 'I have got to talk to you now.'

Mary looked at him in bewilderment. Several street-urchins had recognized her, and several adults, and a little crowd was gathering and staring.

'My dear,' she said, 'I can not hang about streets and talk. Get in. Do not be silly.' She moved him into the car and they rolled away. Close behind them came the nondescript individual in a taxi.

Willie was miserable and said nothing all the way. Not until they were settled down in the cozy living room of Mary's apartment could he raise enough of his lost courage to stammer:

'I have—I have come to say goodbye.'

The nondescript individual, having run them to ground, was speeding toward Mr. Hope and his reward. His client listened, grunted his satisfaction and then rang for the butler.

'Tell Fiss Dorothy I wish to speak with her here,' he said. Dorothy came, still a little agitated from her interview with her father. She could not endure another scene so soon. Old Hope beamed at her in triumph.

'You told me, young lady,' he said, 'that young Hale had promised you never to see that Crayle woman again?'

'Yes,' said Dorothy, chin up, wondering who this stranger might be.

'He is with her now,' said the linoleum king. 'This man just followed them to her flat from the theatre.'

'He is lying,' Dorothy cried. 'You have paid him to say that.'

'Sorry, miss,' said the detective, 'They are there safe and sound. You ring up the flat and see.' He produced a worn note book and delivered into it for a moment. 'Mayfair 2133,' he said. 'You will get him.'

Mary Crayle's pink telephone rang. Mary turned her tear stained face towad Willie.

'You answer it,' she said, 'I am too upset. I couldn't talk to anyone now.'

And Willie picked up the instrument.

'Yes? Who is it?' His face went white and he clutched at the table.

'Dorothy,' he shouted, 'Dorothy, wait.'

'You are there,' said Dorothy, at the other end, 'They told me you were.'

'But I can explain—'

'I have no doubt you can,' she said frigidly, 'Please come round here at once. I do not want explanations—but I do want to see you.'

She hung up the telephone, looked at her father's triumphant sneering face and broke into tears. He came and patted her on the shoulder, motioning the detective to go away.

'Don't take it so hard, dear,' he said to her. 'You should have listened to me; that's all.'

Suddenly she stopped crying, and looked at him fixedly.

'Father, will you put five thousand pounds in my account? Right away?'

'Yes. Of course. But what for?'

Dorothy shrugged her shoulders.

'It's very little compared to what I might have had to pay,' she said. 'Please—I want to be alone till he comes.'

Mr. Hope tiptoed away. He was highly pleased with himself.

'I know you are angry with me—disappointed—hurt—' Willie was saying, 'but it just happened that way. All accident.' His voice died away and he stood staring at Dorothy in a sort of mental paralysis. She regarded him steadily, her eyes narrowed; only her foot tapping on the floor betrayed her agitation.

'Go on,' she said.

'For heaven's sake,' Willie cried angrily, 'do not look at me as though I was trying to sell you a gramiphone.'

This time she said nothing, but her lips grew tighter.

'But don't you realize the bad luck of it all? I only went to—'

'To see that woman, having promised me you wouldn't.'

'Will you believe me if I tell you why I went?'

'I know,' said Dorothy quietly, 'because you are in love with her.' Suddenly she flashed out at him. 'Why not have the courage to ask for money? Why cheat to get it?'

Willie's face was now as set and hard as hers.

'Are you seriously suggesting that I wanted your money?'

'What else did you want?' She picked up a slip of paper from the table and handed it to him. 'There,' she said, 'is my check for five thousand pounds.'

Willie took it and inspected it in a daze. He was sure he was going mad in a minute.

'What's this for?' he asked stupidly.

'I believe one should pay for experience,' said Dorothy, 'You are an expert in teaching and possibly this is underpaying you.'

Willie understood.

'Did you treat the archduke as generously?' he asked.

Dorothy's eyes flashed. She was very near the end of her self-control.

'He would have been insulted by such an offer,' she said.

'No doubt, no doubt,' said Willie, nodding. He still looked at the check. For a wild moment she hoped he would tear it up, throw it in her face and then take her in his arms. But he merely folded it with great care and tucked it in a pocket.

'It's not much,' he said, 'but times are bad for us all and one must be grateful for what one can get.' His eyes met hers, and she had a difficult time looking at him squarely. 'Thank you,' he said, 'Good afternoon and goodbye. This should go a long way in New Zealand.'

Without even a not he turned and walked out of the room. She stood it until he had disappeared, and then rushed after him. But there was nothing but the slam of the door down stairs to indicate that he had ever been here.

CHAPTER FIVE

The bank-teller looked at him curiously when he presented the check. Discretion was his long suit, and he would never tell anybody, but Lord Leeland's worthless son cashing a check drawn by old Hope's daughter was an intriguing spectacle to say the least. It was the first time, so far as he knew, that any woman had ever supplied the youngster with money.

'How will you have it, sir?' he asked mechanically.

'In thousand-pound notes,' said Willie, and stuffed them in his pocket. It was the last time he would ever see this bank and he thought with melancholy of the number and size of those checks of his father's which he had cashed there.

Now he wanted a drink badly and went straight to his club. He was discussing a whiskey-and-soda in great gulps when an acquaintance strolled up.

'ullo, young Hale. Enjoy yourself last night?'

Willie turned a glassy stare on him.

"Could you use a thousand pounds?' he asked.

'Well, rather,' said the man, 'What's the—'

Willie produced his sheaf of notes and spread them out on the table like a handof cards.

'Take the one you think is prettiest,' he said.

'You are in a state for this time of day,' said the man uneasily.

'And now,' said Willie, 'if you could recommend me to some worthy charity—a vulgar one preferred, such as red flannels for the poor—I will give them the lot.'

'Whom have you been robbing?' the man asked, trying to laugh off his uneasiness.

'No one,' said Willie, 'They robbed me—the notes, I mean. Name your charity and they'll have them in five minutes.'

The archduke Paul appeared in the other end of the bar, saw Willie and went out again. Willie's acquaintance grinned.

'I don't know how worthy it is,' he said, 'but there's a man who is an object of charity right enough. His creditors lay quiet as long as the Hope match was going through, but now that is off, they're raising the devil with him. I am told he hasn't the money for a square meal. And a good thing too. I loathe the blighter.' He looked up from his drink and saw Willie already half-way across the room. 'Blutto,' he said, shaking his head. 'I will lay ten to one he is in the papers tomorrow morning.'

In five minutes Willie was in a telegraph office. He hastily scribbled 'With Dorothy Hope's compliments' on a sheet of paper, slipped it and the bank notes into an envelope, and addressed it carefully to the archduke at the Albermarle Club. Then he requested to see the messenger boy who would deliver it.

'Old son,' he said to the messenger, 'This is important. If you do not deliver it to the gentleman it is addressed o—and no one else—I will slit your throat and devour you piecemeal. And when he's got it, run like a hare. Don't give him a moment to ask questions. Here—'a bank-note changd hands out of the twenty-five hundred—'Refresh your memory with this.'

'Blimey, governor,' said the boy. 'You ain't 'arf drunk, are you?

'I am not,' said Willie, 'But if you don't do this job properly, you will wish you were dead. Run.' The boy ran. He was the third person that day who had diagnosed the Honorable William Hale as stark staring mad.

Mr. Hope looked at his daughter across the dinner table.

'Well,' he said, 'your friend Hale cashed your check this afternoon. Then he went to his club, then to a telegraph office and then to book passage for New Zealand—for two.' Dorothy said nothing, but gazed into her soup.

'For two, mind you,' said Mr. Hope, 'The fool detective said something about the second passage being for a dog, but that's probably his perverted sense of humor. It is obvious they are going away together, he and the Crayle woman.'

Still Dorothy said nothing. The butler came with a salver containing a note for her. It was in the archduke's handwriting. She frowned, flapped it down by her plate, and then decided to open it. As she read her face grew bewildered; then it flushed a deep red, and she broke her silence.

'I—I can not understand this at all,' she said, 'it is from Paul—but—'

The linoleum king was delighted.

'Paul? What does he say?'

Dorothy tossed it over to him with a hopeless gesture. Her father looked at the letter:

'Dearest Dorothy:

Your charming thought I will forever treasure. Your sympathetic undestanding of my difficulties has touched me, you never will know how much. Through your kindness in sending me five thousand pounds, I am able to leave for home tonight via Paris. Will you please be assured I shall never forget your thoughtfulness.

kiss your hands, Paul.'

'The rat,' roared Mr. Hope.

'What does it mean?' Dorothy asked wearily.

'Mean? It means that villian Hale cashed your cheque and sent the money to Paul in your name. The swine. I will have him prosecuted for that. I'll—'But his daughter was rocking to and fro in her chair and screaming with laughter. 'What's the matter with you?' shouted her father. 'Stop that nonsense.'

'How divine of him,' she said.

'And the idiot accepted them,' Mr. Houe went on grumbling, 'Took money from a woman. What's the world coming to?'

'I wonder if Willie really is taking her with him to New Zealand,' said Dorothy thoughtfully. 'He owns a dog, you know.'

'I will never believe in anything again if he doesn't,' said Mr. Hope. 'Here—where are you going? Aren't you going to have any dinner?'

'I'm going to Lord Leeland's and do a little groveling,' said Dorothy firmly, 'I'm going to crawl after him on my hands and knees till he promises to take me with him.' She said not look back as she left the room; but her father heard one last burst of merriment out of her before she was gone.

There were difficulties about packing, Willie discovered. For one thing his father and his sister came and argued with him about the New Zealand project, and it was distracting.

'Well,' said Lord Leeland, 'what the devil are you going to New Zealand for?'

'Because it's near Australia if I ever want to go there,' said Willie, emptying another drawer on the floor.

'You'll only come another cropper,' said his lordship, 'and you can't look for any more money out of me, you know. If you leave this house, I have washed my hands of you.'

'Two years ago, you practically threw me out of it,' said Willie. 'Why not be consistent?'

'But Willie,' said Susan pleadingly, 'father's getting old new—'

'I am not,' said Lord Leeland. 'There is enough of that. I want you round here because you gave me the best tip on a horse I ever had in my life yesterdty.'

'I'm going to New Zealand,' said Willie, glaring at them. 'If you will both keep quiet and let me pack I will send you a sheep apiece every Christmas.'

'Very well. You can go to the devil.' said Lord Leeland.

'I'm tired of going so often,' said Willie peevishly. There was a knock on the door. 'I suppose that's Arthur to add his bit to the general glee,' he said and bawled: 'Come in.'

But Dorothy stood on the threshold, regarding them cheerfully.

'Dorothy,' shouted his lordship, 'The very person. This young pup's going to New Zealand. Can you do anything about it?' But Susan had him by the sleeve.

'I want to show you the housekeeping books, father,' she told him urgently and dragged him protesting toward the door.

Willie paid no attention to the lady. She went and sat calmly on the bed, watched his difficulties with his dress shirts and a small suit case, and made friends with George. George it was obvious, took to her immensely.

'You are sitting on my pajamas,' said Willie finally. 'I want to pack them.' She arose and he removed the pajamas.

'Aren't you curious about why I am here?' she asked.

'I am,' he said. 'May I ask what you are doing here? Not that it matters much—'

'I've come to tell you I have forgiven you,' she said sweetly.

He dropped the pajamas in a multi colored head and gasped at her.

'You—you've forgiven me,' he yelled, outraged.

'Yes,' she smiled at him happily. 'Don't you think it is sweet of me?'

'Leave my dog alone,' he roared at her. 'You'll be getting him into some kind of trouble directly.'

Obediently she left George alone and came over to stand provokingly close to him.

'What are you going to do when you get to New Zealand, Willie dear? she asked him.

'Get married,' he growled at her, 'and do not call me dear.'

Dorothy shook her head.

'That won't do,' she said. 'Father is old-fashioned. He'd insist on our getting married before we went.'

He took her by the chin.

'Do you imagine I would marry you after the way you insulted me?'

'You'd be an awful fool if you did not,' she told him. She reached up and patted his cheek. 'I'm pretty,' she said, 'and companionable and you've told me yourself I am a tramp at heart—just suited to be a poor man's wife. Kiss me, Willie.'

'Leave me alone,' he shouted. 'After the way you have behaved.'

'Oh, shut up about the way I have behaved. Think of your own past. I was hurt, jealous, miserable—and if ever you do anthing like that again, I'll smash a bottle over your head.'

He turned to her eagerly

'Would you?'

'I would.'

He beamed on her in a perfect rapture.

'I've been ten years looking for a girl like you,' he said. And he obeyed orders and kissed her thoroughly and with emphasis.

A knock sounded on the door, and Lord Leeland stuck in his head.

'That ope feller's down stairs,' he said. 'Wants to lend you the money for a farm in England.' Then he roared with laughter.

'Well what is there to laugh at in that?' Willie asked him, unwillingly letting Dorothy slide out of his arms.

'Well, it will be his furniture you sell and not mine when you go broke next time. That's relief,' said his lordship.

'What a horrid thing to say about my little Willie,' she said. And kissed her again.

'Bless you, my children,' said his lordship and shut the door.

ENGINEER GAVE UP

Says He Could Not Stand Indigestion Any Longer.—Relieved By Black-Draught.

Pulaski, Va.—How a railroad engineer was relieved of indigestion was described by Mr. C. K. Nelson, a Fourth Street resident of this city. Mr. Nelson said:

"I was suffering from stomach trouble in 1917, and had been suffering for some time. I had a tightness in my chest, a shortness of breath. There seemed to be a heavy weight in the pit of my stomach, and quite a bit of nausea, yet I couldn't vomit. I tried different remedies, yet suffered on just the same. When in West Virginia, on a work train, I was in such a condition that I just gave up and came home. I couldn't stand to work, in my condition.

"Some one told me about Black-Draught. I started taking it in small doses after meals. It helped me, and I went back to work.

"One morning while on my engine I felt like I would smother. I stopped in a little town, bought a package of Black-Draught, took a dose and later in the day took another dose. It relieved me and I have not had a bad spell like that in more than two and a half years."

LOVE SHOWER FOR MISS MOLLIE MOORE

A beautiful love shower was bestowed on Miss Mollie Moore Sunday just before the morning services by the Wesley Bible Class and other friends of the Methodist Sunday School.

Rev. C. A. Lehmberg, pastor was the pleasing representative of the class when he asked Miss Moore to please step to the front of the pulpit. With words of commendation and appreciation, voiced by the class and friends for her beautiful devotion and untiring work for the church and especially for Miss Mollie's work in decorating the church so artistically for Easter morning services and the Easter cantata that evening, presented her with a small decorated box. This came as a complete surprise to Miss Moore, who gracefully received it and thanked the givers in her own sweet, sincere manner. Opening the box after returning home she found a dainty gift, and a contribution to be used by the receiver as she wishes.

Miss Moore has been a worker in the Methodist church her entire life and holds the esteem and love of its members and scores of friends in other denominations. Embassy Captive Saved by Message in Bread

It was hardly surprising to find that the Soviet ambassador to France issued a prompt denial of the story that three of his fellow countrymen were being held captive in the Russian embassy, but something of this kind really did happen in London once, writes a columnist in the Manchester Guardian. Lord Alverstone tells about it in his "Reminiscences." In the mews at the back of the Chinese embassy in Portland place, a piece of bread was picked up, appropriately enough, by a baker, and inside it was a note addressed to a certain Chinese resident in London. The note stated that the writer had been about to pass the embassy in the company of two of his fellow countrymen when he had been bustled inside, and that he was now a prisoner in an attic in the building and feared that something worse was going to befall him.

The foreign office was not at all pleased to be confronted with such a delicate situation, but the attorney general was quite positive that diplomatic privileges did not include liberty to incarcerate anybody in an embassy, and, an intimation to that effect being gently conveyed to the ambassador, the prisoner was released. There is room for speculation how far the course of history might have been altered if that bit of bread with its message had not been picked up, for the writer of it was the Sun Yat Sen who a dozen years later became first president of the Chinese republic.

Remarkable Low Note on Australian Organ

On the great organ in Sydney town hall, Australia, is a pedal stop of 64 feet. The pipe actually of that length, the lowest C, does not stand upright, but is bent in several places, so that it may be accommodated in the interior of the instrument. The note this giant pipe emits—the stop is a reed stop, a "contra-posaune"—is fearsome. It is more like a cavernous growl than a musical note, and one of the little jokes of the tuner when he is showing visitors through the great army of pipes in this organ is to have the famous 64-foot pedal pipe sounded when the visitor is alongside it and not expecting the shock. It is an unfailing surprise. The vibrations of this low C can almost be counted—in which regard, no doubt, the note resembles that of the basso-profundo whose boast it was that he had always to begin to sing his lowest note 32 beats before it was needed, since it took so long to become audible to the listener!

Lizard Teaches Lesson

Chuckwallas are gentle and easily handled, and make interesting pets if captured and kept in comfortable quarters with a satisfactory food supply. We know too little of the habits of even our common wild neighbors, and these dwellers in the desert could teach us many things that we do not understand, says Nature Magazine. For instance, if we could eliminate the waste of our bodies by means of dry uric acid instead of by drinking quantities of water, it would be very convenient at times, and we might go for months without drinking water. Apparently none of the cold-blooded reptiles suffer from the heat, and many thrive in the hottest parts of our low desert valleys, basking on rocks so hot that one can hardly bear to touch them with the naked hand.

Siam's National Flower

The chrysanthemum, regent of oriental gardens, but comparatively new in the Occident, is about to have its one thousand six hundredth birthday. Following its arrival in Japan and China from Korea in the early 300's, the little pompon was immediately adopted by oriental royalty. The chrysanthemum still remains the national flower of Siam. In Japan the 16-petaled flower adorns the emperor's crest. The star and collar, emblem of the Imperial Order of the Chrysanthemum, is the choicest decoration the emperor of Japan can bestow and is seldom found on the breast of any save royalty.

Sell "One"

The advertising manager of a certain company was endeavoring to sell his plan to the board of directors. When he saw that it would be almost impossible to do so, he made this remark: "It is not necessary for me to go into the details of the complexities of this sound advertising plan with one member of this board, because this intelligent man understands advertising well. I would, however, like to confer with him immediately after this meeting." When the meeting was adjourned, every member remained in his seat.—American Mutual Magazine.

Boys on Parade

As in the case of the college student, it takes but little to start the New York street urchin off on a parade. He finds a long pole, or even a discarded and dilapidated broom, which will do for a flagpole. He and his companions seize on a pile of celery stalks thrown out by a grocer; these are carried as swords or muskets, and the line of youngsters perhaps half a dozen in all, march proudly up the street to the badly sung tune of "The Maine Stein Song."

Husbands and Wives

The man who tells you that he never had an unpleasantness with his wife is a liar—or a dud.—American Magazine.

FIREMEN ASK SUPPORT FOR BASEBALL TEAM HERE

Appeal Is Presented To Citizens of Cameron For Attendance

The Cameron Fire Department is a volunteer unit, as you probably know, its services being rendered solely for honor and loyal citizenship to the Friendly City of Cameron. The firemen receive no remuneration whatever for their services, but on the contrary, members are required to pay annual dues, just to risk their lives and limbs to keep fires in Cameron at a minimum.

There is very little social activity connected with this organization, but this year, the Cameron Volunteer Firemen are sponsoring a baseball team and are using a number of their young men members. Thus far in the season, the Firemen have made a wonderful showing. The purpose of this article is not to ask for donations since the team is already organized and equipped for action by the local fire department. The real purpose of this article is to put before the citizens of Cameron the fact that they have never seen the time when the firemen failed to respond to an emergency call. They have performed their duty night and day, summer and winter. The firemen feel that the citizens of Cameron are not showing appreciation of the fire team when they fail to support the baseball team sponsored by the organization.

In a recent game with the Waco Gassers, at which time the Firemen defeated their opponents by a score of 3 to 2, a mere handful of Cameron citizens were present to assist the boys in their activity. It seems that the fire-fighting services rendered to Cameron should merit creditable patronage. The team is striving hard to win its games and success can be bought only by local home support. The recent game here was well worth seeing, in fact as good as any league game. Certainly, the price did not stand in the way. From the standpoint taken by the fireboys of the team, the citizens of Cameron must not appreciate this part of their city government.

Did you notice a short time ago the fifteen per cent reduction in fire insurance rates for Cameron? Did you stop to think who was directly responsible for this? The fire boys had much to do with it. They hold the fire losses here to a minimum.

Do any other citizens of Cameron perform duties for Cameron people without pay, never knowing at what time, life or limb may be lost?

Yet when the fire boys try to have a ball club, only about fourteen citizens turn out to support them. It costs each of these the immense sum of twenty-five cents to enjoy a game. What if there were no volunteer firemen in Cameron? Have you ever stopped to figure how many thousands of dollars would have to be expended annually to pay for these men to risk their lives, as Cameron firemen are now doing voluntarily? Surely we can get more citizens of Cameron to turn out for ball games. This is the only social activity these boys have to remunerate them for their volunteer services in answering the fire alarm. Certainly you should be willing to see some of these games, and we believe that you will do so. Watch for the dates of future games in Cameron and show the boys your appreciation.

Wm. R. Rogers To Temple Thursday For Treatment To Eye

Wm. R. Rogers left Cameron at noon Thursday for Temple in company with Giles L. Avriett and Mrs. Rogers and Mrs. Chas. McDermott where treatment will be made for an injury sustained Wednesday morning to his right eye.

Mr. Rogers was clipping a strand of wire at his home when a portion of it struck the ball of his right eye. At first it was feared he might lose the sight but it later developed that the pupil was not touched, according to the diagnosis at that time.

Thursday morning Mr. Rogers was advised by physicians to go at once to Temple for an examination. Fear that permanent injury may have been sustained was expressed again on Thursday.

Mayor Chambers In Temple Hospital Is Showing Improvement

Friends in Cameron of Mayor W. W. Chambers will be glad to know that his condition has shown an improvement.

He has been in a Temple hospital for more than a week following an operation for cancer of the throat. Another operation will be performed within a few days in an effort to remove all parts of the infection. It was said by those in close touch with the condition of Mayor Chambers that there is a possibility of his recovery in a short time, although his condition is serious.

The membership as of June 30 was 618,611 in 2555 councils in the United States, Canada, Phillipine Islands, Cuba, Mexico, Porto Rico, Newfoundland, Alaska and Panama. The insurance in force was $288,304,040 and the insurance liabilities as calculated by the actuaries on January 1 were $223,370,629. The ratio of assets to liabilities was 130.44 per cent and the margin of safety was 30.44 per cent over and above the statutory standards.

BAPTIST LEADERS IN SESSION TUESDAY

DISTRICT REPRESENTATIVES FOR 200 CHURCHES CONVENE HERE

Christian leaders and workers numbering twenty strong and representing a territory comprising some 200 churches of District 15, Baptist State Convention, met at the First Baptist church on Tuesday morning. This group, presided over by Dr. J. L. Wharton of Bryan, discussed the question of rounding up the budgets of the churches of the district, planning to send all available amount of money to the office headquarters in Dallas by May 3. The finest spirit prevailed and an optimistic note was sounded and the integrity of our institutions magnified. A round table discussion led by Rev. Roy Holloman elicited the fact that the cause of the denomination is being given paramount interest by those churches represented. A telegram was sent to our beloved secretary, Dr. W. R. White, assuring him of loyal support in the projects and program of the state work.

STRYCHNINE FATAL TO YOUTH HERE

W. D. Blancett, Jr., 19, died Saturday night, April 18,1931 within a short time after he is said to have taken strychnine.

The young man, recently coming to Cameron from Hillsboro to accept employment at the Humble Station operated by R. C. Moody is said to have taken the poison in the presence of others at an address on North Fannin Street about 7:30 o'clock.

He obtained the poison at a local drug store and is said to have signed for it with the representation that he would kill some rats.

The quantity of strychnine taken, it was declared by authorities, was sufficient to produce death of 198 people. No statements were made by the youth other than that he wished to die.

After it became known that he had taken the poison he was rushed to the Cameron hospital where physicians sought to save his life. He died within a short time after reaching the hospital.

He was the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. D. Blancett of Hillsboro. Funeral services were held there Sunday afternoon at the First Baptist church conducted by Rev. Kirkland. The body was taken to Hillsboro by the Green Brothers undertaking firm. Interment was made in the cemetery at Hillsboro.

The youth is survived by his parents, three sisters and three brothers.

New Name Is Given Baseball Team Here

In the beginning of the baseball season here the Cameron Fire Department expressed their willingness to sponsor the club for the current year and so made a donation of $50 to start the team off. As a matter of appreciation the name has been changed from the Cameron Comets to the Cameron Firemen. Hereafter they will be referred to as such.

The strongest team to represent this city in years is being welded at this time and a pesonal of their roster will convince the fan of this fact. Herewith is the present list of players: Vaughn Jenness, Manager; Archie Peel, William Worcester, Ray Walston, R. Keith, Ralph Wiley, D. Threatt, Sam McDermott, Prothro Deer, Douglas Williams, Kenneth Keith, Henderson Walker, George Miller, Elmo Baggett, Earl Thompson and H. Threatt.

GAMES BOOKED

On Saturday the Cameron Firemen will have the Sharp team here for a game at the Lawless Green Field beginning at 3:00 p. m. This is the first game to be played in the Telegram cup race by the Firemen.

On the following day, Sunday, April 26, at 3:00 p. m. the Rosebud Roses will be on the same field for a game. There has been a strong rivalry between these teams and the fans are due to see the Firemen on the field in full force and fighting from the start to the end.

In view of the fact the local team is so much stronger than heretofore the fans will have every reason to feel proud of them. The lovers of our national past time are promised a treat at the games they witness, wherever the Firemen participate.

METHODISTS WILL HAVE A CHURCH NIGHT

The Methodist people of the community are getting ready for a delightful occasion which they term a 'Church Night.' They will gather in the basement of the church Friday evening (April 24) at eight o'clock and for two hours 'mix and mingle as only Christian people can do it. Committees have been appointed and are busily at work to decorate the basement appropriately, to offer an appropriate program (informal) and to serve refreshments. It is desired and expected that every man, woman or child who calls himself a Methodist, will be in attendance and if any one of them is married to a Baptist Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Disciple or any one else, such a one is considered a Methodist on that evening and is just as welcome as the thoroughbreds. Let every Methodist who reads this invite every other Methodist to be present and then be sure to come.

The Committee.

P. S.—The only reason why we are confining ourselves to the Methodists this time is because we haven't room for others. And let the wary know that there will not be a collection for anything that night.

Mrs. Sam Hefley was here a few days the first of the week from Austin where she has been with her husband, Hon. Sam Hefley who is attending the Legislature.

MARLIN DISTRICT ORGANIZATIONS IN CONVENTION HERE MAY 3

Representatives of all young people's organizations in each local church in the Marlin District are called to meet in a District Set-Up Meeting at Cameron, Texas on Sunday afternoon, May 3, 1931, according to officials of the Methodist church having charge of district work of this church. It is purposed to take up at that time plans of reorganization of the educational features of the church's program as they affect the young people in each local church. This re-organization is the result of a vastly changed plan of Christian Education in each local Methodist church as authorized at the last session of the General Conference of this church held in Dallas, Texas, during May, 1930 and affects all the departments of each church pertaining to young people's activities. Among these groups included in this change of program are both Epworth Leagues, Young People's Sunday School organizations, Young Peoples Missionary Societies and any other organizations of young people in the local church. Every church is urged to have capable representative at this meeting in order that all may understand the new program, and be able to move towards its effective ness in each local church.

Roy Baskin, Sunday school superintendent will preside; members of the school, old and young, will take part in rendering music and talks. Miss Billie Gaither, the Sunday school pianist will be at the organ; we hope to make it a most delightful and profitable hour. At the close a free-will offering will be taken for the general Sunday school work of the Texas Conference. The Sunday school will begin at 9:45 a. m. and have its regular work; for once every member of the school is expected to remain for the eleven o'clock hour. Let mothers so instruct their children. The subject of the sermon at the 7:45 p. m. hour will be 'The Banishment of Fear.' Nothing, perhaps, is so haunting as fear; let those who are thus burdened come and attend the service and we shall try to do them good. We had great services last Sunday, may we have even better ones next.

BURLINGTON
Mrs. George Logan

Lee Gleason of Houston visited his mother, Mrs. P. J. Morris and family here last week end.

Gordon Davis and family moved here recently from Baileyville. Mr. Davis and family lived here a few years ago and we are glad to have them move back.

Among the visitors at church last Sunday were Monroe Henson and Mr. White of Briary; Arch Henson and family of Rosebud; Richard Murphy and family of Waco.

The Baylor and other Waco folks here for the Mission program Saturday night and Sunday were Miss Sidney Claire Teague, Rev. Carl Sullenburger, Rev. Van Arsdale, Miss Mildred Tenney, Mrs. Barnett and daughter, Mary Ruth and Miss Freith.

The following Ben Arnold folks attended services here last Sunday: Mr. Spitler and daughter, Miss Alva, and Miss Jessie Mae Bell.

Attendance in the Senior B. Y. P. U. last Sunday night was fairly good. Two of the group from Waco took part on the program in the absence of some of the members while Miss Tinney assisted the secretary with the report. There were a number of visitors in the B. Y. P. U. and they were indeed welcome. The quiz next Sunday night will be in the form of a Bible drill, something like that of the Juniors but adapted for the Seniors. All the members agree that they need to get better acquainted with the Bible and believe this method will be useful in this way. All the members are asked to bring their Bibles and if they have extra ones bring them as they may be needed. The groups will compete against each other and the side which finds the most Bible references will be recognized as being the best Bible-read group. The topic for discussion Sunday night will be 'The Heart of Missions' an ever-interesting subject. Everyone is invited to meet with the Union any time you feel like doing so.

The following Burlington folks attended services over at the Methodist church last Monday afternoon: Mesdames Jake Dodson, H. F. Cobb, L. W. Sample, Nannie Prescott, Misses Ola Lee and Claudia Foshea, Mrs. J. J. Foshea and daughter, Mildred, Mrs. George Logan and Master Neil Dodson.

Mrs. A. Dodson spent several days out in the country at her old home recently with her daughter, Mrs. J. Little and family.

New Handy Cash Policies

Handy Cash Policies pay $350.00 in event of a natural death and $500.00 in event of accidental death.

Attached to each policy is a draft for $250.00 which can be cashed at any bank immediately.

Handy Cash Policies are standard life insurance contracts, being issued on the ordinary life plan (age 10 to 65) and the twenty pay life plan (age one day to 60 years). Like all standard contracts, Handy Cash Policies carry 'cash' and paid up options. These values increase each year and serve as a sinking fund for any emergency.

Handy Cash Policies provide that the premium deposit shall be made annually in advance. On the ordinary life plan at age of 10 the annual premium is $5.03. This premium remains the same thruout the life of the contract.

The cost of one of these little, new copyrighted Handy Cash Policies is so pitifully small that no member of any family can sensibly afford to be without one to meet emergency in case of death.

This copyrighted Handy Cash Policy is designed specifically for the purpose of providing ready cash with which to meet the many expenses that accompany the closing of life's last chapter.

CAMERON COMETS LOSE NIGHT GAME TO WACO

By SUNNY POPE

When time to start play at the ball game at the Katy Park in Waco Thursday it was found several of the Comets had not shown up to participate so it was necessary to draft recruits from the Cameon visitors who were hustled into uniforms and the game was played under this handicap.

The Comets met defeat at the hands of the Waco Packers 8 to 6 in an abbreviated game. This was the first time some of the Comet line up had ever so much as seen night baseball. To add to the misfortunes most of the Comets were not uniformed until after the hour set for the start which was 8 p. m.

At that though the makeshift Comets threw several scares into the Packers. For the first inning Wilson walked. Thompson got a hit placing Wilson on second. Peel then poled out a long double to the outfield scoring Wilson and Thompson. In attempting to stretch the hit into a three bagger Peel was thrown out at third.

The Packers knotted the score in their first time at bat by getting 2 runs on one hit and an error. In the second inning the Packers scored five runs on four errors. Then in the fifth the Packers obtained the only score they deserved but even this was a gift run as Peel gave a base on balls to an opponent as the bases were loaded.

The Comets out hit the Packers nine to seven and also led in errors making nine to Waco's three.

Doubtless Peel would have won handily had the Comet lineup been on the field. As it was he fanned ten of the thirty-fourmen who faced him during the game. However at times he grew wild as he gave five bases onballs.

Jenness and Peel batted at a .500 clip while Baggett and Kirk were piling up a .333 average with the hickory.

Considering the handicap the Comets did remarkably well to hold the Packers as well as they did, as the Waco team is considered one of the strongest amateur teams in the state.

YOE HIGH DEFEATS HOLLAND 7 TO 5

WORCESTER PITCHES LOCAL TEAM TO VICTORY IN GAME FRIDAY

By SUNNY POPE

On Friday afternoon the Yoe high team took on the Holland high boys who had won the Bell county championship, and won a very decisive battle seven to five. Four of the Yoe high lads were especially vicious in the attack, namely Wiley, Williams, Miller and Worcester. These four were the main contributors to the runs batted in but Tucker deserves especial mention as the box score shows he got only one hit in three official times at bat but he scored two of the Yoe high runs.

Worcester weakened in the sixth allowing three scores to be made on four hits and an error. Again in the next frame the visitors scored two runs on two hits coupled with an error.

Wiley assumed the hurling assignment and for the two innings only one Hollander reached first base and this because of an error.

The Holland boys played errorless ball but seemed powerless to hit when hits meant runs. The Yoe high boys are charged with five errors though not of the costly vaiety.

In the third inning Worcester drove a home run over the left field barrier as Miller stood on first having reached there on a fielder's choice. Dump Wiley made three hits, two of which were two baggers. Worcester also got a two bagger in the eighth.

The Yoe high next year should be up with the leaders in Texas if they continue to improve as they have and we freely predict they will make a bid for next year's pennant in their class.

The Waco high came right back in their half of the eighth to put over the winning run. Brooks got his second two bagger of the day and scored on an infield put out.

In their last time at bat the Yoe high went out in one, two, three order. The Waco boys outhit the Cameron boys twelve to six. In the error column the local team made five miscues whereas the Waco boys were charged with three. Brooks proved to be a star of the game getting two two-baggers and a single in four times up. JAKE RICHARDS, JR.

Jake Richards, Jr., the eight month old son of Mr. and Mrs. Jake Richards in Cameron, died Tuesday evening at 6:30 o'clock after a few days illness of whooping cough and pneumonia.

Services were held at North Elm church Wednesday afternoon at three o'clock by Rev. N. D. Timmeman, pastor of the First Baptist church here and interment was made in North Elm cemetery, Green Brothers in charge of arrangements.

JOHN DOWTY

John Dowty, 67, died suddenly at the home of N. Y. Hayes in the Marlow community Monday night, April 20, 1931.

Funeral services for deceased were conducted on the afternoon of April 21 by Rev. C. A. Lehmberg, pastor of the First Methodist church in Cameron with interment in Marlow cemetery.

He had been a resident of the Hayes home for a number of years where he had worked for many years. His wife preceded him in death about 11 years ago. The only survivors of the family is a step daughter, Mrs Annie Evard of Cameron.

SUNNY'S SIDE

A few caome on the Firemen-Waco Gasser Game.

When any pitcher can hold the lineup the Firemen presented Sunday to the twenty-first man before a hit is registered off of his delivery deserves especial mention. Taking the line up that faced L. Phillips they present a .333 per cent batting average in amateur baseball anywhere.

Peel is the only man to register two hits during the game. One was a single and the other a two bagger against the left field wall missing a home run by inches.

In one respect the most remarkable game ever witnessed in Cameron in that the first baseman accounts for 16 put outs and Peel accounted for 10 by the strike out route.

The Firemen earned only one run in the game which was the winning one. Neither of their runs were made without a contributing error.

The Firemen are allowed twenty men on their roster during their playing season. Elsewhere in Sunny's Side will be found a list of players so far certified. Others may or may not be added, this being discretionary with the manager.

Had it not been for Doug's timely two bagger in the ninth the Firemen would have had an excellent chance of carrying home in their satchel a well deserved victory and one they would have had reason to brag over.

Sunny is figuring, at this early date, on the game with the prisoners at Huntsville. We wish to make this trip to within the prison walls again this year and many who failed to make the trip last year have expressed their determination to be in the caravan this year.

Last year when we went to Huntsville the Cameron fans and players alike showed such good sportsman ship that the prison team as a whole voted for a return game with the Firemen for this year. Those of you who made the trip last year can vouch for the splendid picnic which we all enjoyed and the hospitable treatment we were accorded.

Who wants to go this year? Write Sunny.

Odd New Zealand Bird, Kiwi, Nears Extinction

The strangest bird in the world—the kiwi-kiwi, is described as follows in Boys' Life, the Boy Scout publication.

"Native of New Zealand, he nearly makes fact of ancient fable—current when the continent was first discovered—that everything around Australia was upside down. The kiwi is practically wingless and completely flightless. He has no visible tail. His brownish plumage, moreover, because the feather-filaments are disunited, looks more like coarse hair. His nostrils, unlike any other bird's, are at the very tip of the long beak, that is flexible and very sensitive to touch.

"The kiwi growls like a dog, and snaps his bill as you crack your fingers; he can hiss like a cat when angry. His extraordinarily powerful legs can give mighty kicks, not backward but forward, and have been known to break a bone in a man's hand. In small flocks, the few kiwis left of a disappearing species inhabit New Zealand's hilly forests. Females burrow long tunnels, laying in a nest at the very end of it two large eggs—eggs a quarter the length of the whole bird. Incubating is entirely the job of the male.

"Maoris are very fond of kiwi flesh broiled or roasted, so fond that the bird was well hunted out before ever a white man saw one. Now the peculiar bird, distant relative of ostrich, emu, cassowary, and survivor of a species that flourished with the extinct, gigantic dinornis and fierce, sluggish moas, millions of years ago, is fast approaching extinction."

Marriage Promise Just Incident of Vacation?

A New Yorker, lifted out of his habitual caution by the balmy atmosphere of Florida during a winter vacation, brought suit against a girl he met down there, to recover a ring. The young lady contested the suit.

When it came up in court, the young man said that they had enjoyed a fond good-by on the beach, but later, when both had returned to New York, the girl had passed him up cold. The girl herself admitted it, saying:

"I really didn't know whether I should recognize him or not. Our acquaintance in Florida was really very slight."

"But," expostulated the court, glancing at the sparkling ring, "you promised to marry him, didn't you?"

"Why, yes," admitted the girl, "but that was all."—Los Angeles Times.

Europe's "Holy Alliance"

The Holy Alliance was the name of a league formed by Russia, Austria and Prussia after the fall of Napoleon in 1815 for the purpose of regulating the affairs of Europe "by the principles of Christian charity," says an article in Pathfinder Magazine. Notwithstanding its professed purpose the real policy of the Holy Alliance was to make every endeavor possible to stabilize existing dynasties and to resist all change. The league endured until 1830 and was in time joined by all the important and European monarchs except those of England and Turkey. The Monroe Doctrine was enunciated largely to warn the Holy Alliance not to interfere with the newly established republics in Latin America.

Biblical Flowers

There are comparatively few flowers named in the Bible. It is reported that as a whole the Syrian people were not particularly fond of flowers. Among those named are the myrtle, Isaiah, 4:13; Rose of Sharon, Isaiah, 35:1; Song of Solomon, 2:1; lily, I Kings, 7:26; Son of Solomon, 2:16, 6:23; Matthew, 6. Flax is found in Exodus, Genesis, Leviticus, Esther, Judges, Proverbs and Kings. Burning bush (or acacia) is mentioned in Exodus, 3:4. The lily is an Arabic general term and applies to the tulip, ranuculus, narcissus, iris, water lily, and particularly the anemones which carpet the ground during the summer season throughout Palestine.

Treasure Trove on Farm

On the land of a widow farmer of Aarhus (Denmark) 6,000 copper and silver coins of the days of Eric Glipping (1259-1286), king of Denmark, were found. It was in the reign of this king that the first rigsdag, or general assembly, became an established legislature in Denmark. The coins, as treasure trove, were by law the property of the state, but the widow received a sum of money in exchange.

Only Daddy

Elizabeth Ann's mother was telling the little girl and her small brother the story of Cinderella. Suddenly there came a knock from the front door.

"Go see who's there," said her mother. "Maybe it's the fairy prince."

Big Business

John, age eight, had just been promoted to 3A. One day when he came home he was telling his mother about their new organization; that they had elected a president, vice president and such. Mother asked what the object of the organization was and after a moment John replied:

"To promote better citizenship."

Almost Succeeded in "Cheating the Hangman"

The phrase "Cheat the hangman" appears to have had originally a positive significance rather than to have been applied to the mere accident of being cut down prematurely. In 16[illegible] a man named Richard Johnson was hanged at Shrewsbury. He hung for half an hour and still showed signs of life, so the hangman went up to see what was the matter. Noticing two hooks at the back of Johnson's neck, he took him down, pulled off his shirt, and discovered that the hooks were secured by a rope wound around and under the culprit's body, the whole device taking the strain off his neck. The ropes were cut off and he was put up again, when the job was effectively completed. Johnson had previously applied to the undersheriff for the privilege of being buried in his full garb, and if he had concealed the hooks properly and been more adept in simulation he would no doubt have lived to tell the tale. The records convey the impression that tricks of this kind were not new, and that the hangman assumed a knowing or frankly suspicious look when he went forward to investigate. — Manchester (Eng.) Guardian.

Odd Pledges Accepted by Spanish Pawnshop

Pawnshops are often amazingly interesting places—especially when you happen to be hard up. And the most curious of all of them is probably one in Barcelona, Spain, where birds and animals are accepted as pledges. Bears, camels, horses and dogs are accepted by this unique "uncle" as a matter of course. The chief patrons are circus proprietors. One polar bear who was handed, so to speak, over the counter by his needy owner proved to have an appetite more remarkable than that of any small boy at a Christmas party. His owner could not redeem him, and other circus proprietors who visited the shop in search of four-footed "turns" were apparently aware of his fame as an eater, for no purchaser could be found for him. At last he had to be killed, lest his food bill ruin the business. A woman snake charmer recently gave into the care of 'uncle" a collection of performing snakes! She needed money to return to her native country. A few months later, however, she succeeded in redeeming her pets from their temporary home.

Tourists for 300 Years

Delft in the Eighteenth century was celebrated for its pottery and porcelain—this repute has gone, although there is a modern cheaper Delft ware which gets some honor from the past. The modern tourist hardly notices it when he finds this really delightful old Dutch city. He is more apt to be led by his guide to see the Prinsenhof on the Oude Delft, where the great William of Orange was killed in 1584, by his murderer Gerhard, or to see the tomb of Admiral Tromp in the Oude Kerk, for he was the victor of 32 naval battles, including the defeat of the English fleet. Grotius, the first international lawyer, also lies here. The Dutch consider it one of their most interesting places and for 300 years it has received tourists who praise it.

Not by Bread Alone

Man cannot live by bread alone. He hungers and thirsts after knowledge. He pushes the boundaries of his mind's dominion to the frontiers of the cosmos. The distances between the stars exist in his mental measurements. Can one imagine physical air waves accidentally falling together into Beethoven's "Fifth Symphony," or physical type fortuitously arranging itself into Shelley's "Ode to the West Wind," or stones carving themselves and falling together into the cathedral of Amiens? There is a plus quality in such things that overpasses all materialistic needs and that materialism never can explain.—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

Divisions of Orient

Japan, China and the other countries on or near the eastern coast of Asia comprise the geographical region known as the Far East. "The Orient" is a more general term and includes all countries in Asia east of the Mediterranean. "Near East" is applied to Turkey in Europe, Asia Minor, Armenia, Georgia, Azerbaijan, Persia, Syria, Palestine, Mesopotamia, Arabia and Egypt. Thus it will be seen that the Near East and the Far East in a general way consist of divisions of the Orient.

Ancient Rhodesian Foundry

An ancient iron foundry, buried six feet in a cavern, has been dug up by the Italian expedition which is searching for traces of prehistoric man near the Livingstone rocks in Rhodesia. Here 3,000 or 4,000 years ago a superior, intellectual race smelted iron by primitive methods, such as are now known to the Bantu people. The discovery indicates the great age of the Zimbabwe and other Rhodesian stone ruins, and throws new light on the history of metallurgy.

PEEL WINS PITCHERS BATTLE HERE SUNDAY

By SUNNY POPE

What proved to be an old fashioned pitchers duel was won Sunday afternoon when Cameron defeated the Waco Gassers three to two, though it required ten innings to turn the trick. Peel was on the mound for the locals while T. Phillips hurled for the opponents. In points of affectiveness Peel proved the better as during his ten innings he fanned ten opponents and walked none while Phillips whiffed six and walked five. The Gassers put over the first score of the game in the second when two hits and an overthrow by Jenness let in one run. In the sixth an error by Williams gave the opponents pitcher a lease on first. He went to second on an infield out and scored on Baker's two bagger. This proved to be the end of their run making. Then came the ninth inning, Jenness, first up got on first on an infield error. Walker then forced Jenness at second. Wiley singled putting Walker on second. McDermott got on first on the second baseman's error. Vogelsang flew out to center. With the bases loaded and two out Williams singled over third scoring the two runs needed to tie the scores. Williams stopped at second on the throw in. Keith walked. Threatt fanned for the third out.

In Waco's time at bat Bennett was out Keith to McDermott. Carroll, hitting for Zoock singled. T. Phillips fanned and L. Phillips popped out to Wiley.

Peel, first up in the ninth dry cracked one against the left field fence barely missed clearing the wall which was scored a two bagger. Jenness flew out to center. Walker met one of Mr. Phillips slants through the box and out into center field scoring Peel. In the matter of hits Peel got the first Cameron hit in the sixth. In the ninth inning Baggett got one. Wiley and Williams got one each in the ninth and in the tenth Peel's two bagger and Walkers single were all the hits made.

The Cameron lineup is undoubtedly much stronger than last year and we freely predict they will make it tough sledding for the opposition this year.

Self-Revelation

Perhaps the most withering and wittiest rejoinder ever made on a political platform, thinks Sir Ian Malcolm, writing in his reminiscences, "Trodden Ways," was that made by Joseph H. Choate during an election campaign in New York. Following a speech by "Boss" Croker—who rarely spoke in public—in which he had "completely given away his case," in the judgment of his opponents, Mr. Choate gravely said:

"Now, consider the case of Balaam's ass; before it spoke all men regarded it as quite an ordinary quadruped; but after it had spoken they discovered what an extraordinary ass it was."—Kansas City Star..

British Flag a Mixture

The Union Jack of Great Britain is composed of three crosses, representing England, Scotland and Ireland. The cross of St. George for England is a broad, upright Latin cross, red on a white ground; the cross of St. Andrew for Scotland is a saltire or X-shaped, white on a blue ground; the cross of St. Patrick for Ireland is a red saltire on a white ground. When the union of the two crowns of England and Scotland took place upon the occasion of James VI of Scotland to the English throne as James I, the flags of England and Scotland were united. The union flag as it is now flown did not appear until 1801.

Wise Reader Will Not Spoil Joy in New Book

One should read a book in the way he goes through a strange town in his car, Charles E. Tracewell writes, in the Washington Star. He does not stop the vehicle at the court house, and launch forth into a public denunciation of the architect who created the structure.

He does not assemble a gathering of the natives in the square and proceed to tell them that the traffic regulations of their one-horse town are vile, their streets badly in need of repair and their mayor evidently a sap of the first water.

No, he does nothing of the kind. He may see all these things and he may want to be so assertive, but the chances are exactly 100 to nothing that he will merely keep his eyes and ears wide open, be interested in everything he sees and hears and go on about his business, that of getting out of town to the next one.

Reading a new book is somewhat similar. A book is a journey, which, once taken, can never be taken again in its exhilarating newness, its pristine colors, its excitement, its vividness, its commonplace drama.

No matter how fine a book may be or how much one may enjoy its second reading, or its third or fourth reading, there can never be but one first time with it, and, this being true one is a fool to spoil it by talking or snoring, or fuming, in his own behalf.

Native Irish Costumes Before Queen Elizabeth

Writing of the native costume of Ireland in the early days, "Costume Throughout the Ages" says: "Since Elizabethan days the dress of the Irish has had little to distinguish it from that worn in England, but before the time of that queen who, like Henry III, made many laws pertaining to the clothing of her subjects, Irishmen wore kilts similar to those of the Scotchman, accompanied by leggings laced by string tipped with bronze, shoes of brown leather, and a pleated linen shirt. Over all was a sleeveless loose cloak that was long and made of bright-colored wool. Some wore a fitted coat, much like the present-day frock coat with tight sleeves, no collar, and a broad girdle at the waist . . . The women wore a linen undergarment and over this long gowns of the same material, dyed saffron, or a costly fabric imported from the continent. Their long capes had hoods attached. In jewelry, they wore bracelets, pins, brooches, rings, and torques about their necks. Today, modern Continental dress is found in all parts of Ireland, all traces of the old dress having disappeared."

Tribe of Smiling People

The Samoans are a happy race. They are smiling all the time except when they are laughing and it takes very little to make them laugh. A large group of native stevedores toiling under the torrid sun were thrown into convulsions by the sight of a tractor which they were taking from the hold. They concluded it was some new kind of an automobile with a single seat. The Samoan has little or nothing to worry him and hence his jovial disposition. His food grows all about him and his clothing demands are quite limited. A clean garment of bright colors and some cheap jewelry make a well-dressed woman and the young children wear no clothes at all. There are many short and sudden showers, but as a rule the climate is warm and sunny and the temperament of the people seems to be the same.

Glaciers and Electricity

Changing sizes of glaciers are of practical as well as scientific importance, and hence for many years elaborate measurements have been made of them, partly under government auspices, says Nature Magazine. There is an international glacier commission, founded in 1894, which collects such measurements from all countries and publishes them every year. The Swiss government is especially interested in watching the variations of glaciers, because they affect the flow of the mountain streams upon which Switzerland depends for generating electricity. Systematic observations of glaciers are also valuable as a means of anticipating disastrous avalanches and floods.

Ancient Pewter

What is believed to be the oldest piece of pewter in existence is on exhibition at Field museum in Chicago. It is an inscribed tablet bearing in Chinese a date indicating the year A. D. 85. It was found in a tomb in Lo-Yang, province of Honan, China. This pewter is a relic of the Han dynasty and is executed as a deed, or grant of land, for the burial place of the governor of Tungkun, who was a great scholar highly esteemed by his contemporaries, according to Dr. Berthold Laufer, curator of anthropology.

You Win

A Connecticut citizen, who has played anagrams for a "good spell," writes wrathfully to the Wall Street Journal that he was cheated out of the county anagram championship by the ignorance of the judge, who holds down the lexicographer's easy chair at "the Corners" general store. "He claimed," fumes the correspondent, "there is no such word as 'zloty'; I say there is. Am I right?" "Absolutely, old sport," assures the editor. "A 'zloty' is a Polish coin, designed, no doubt, for slot machines."

Football Player Pays Price for Popularity?

The football hero has his price to pay. Either he faces a life of continual strenuous exercise or a breakdown from the lack of exercise, as shown by Dr. Henry Pleasants, Jr., in Hygeia Magazine.

Football is a grand game, says Doctor Pleasants, but a player cannot keep it up for the rest of his life. The biggest and huskiest men are beaten into the finest physical condition in the shortest possible time. Every year they go through this periodic grind and muscles are developed that they cannot keep in condition unless they become piano movers when they are out of school.

A certain number are fortunate enough to gain a taste for tennis or golf; others go into professional football, and a few become coaches. But a vast number go into indoor jobs that a one-legged, cave-chested, 100 pound, sixty-year-old clerk could do.

When an athlete or an active man becomes sedentary, every cell in his body becomes flabby and the body fluids are filled with poisons accumulated from the unused muscles. The heart has grown from the exercise and like the other muscles, it becomes flabby and accumulates poisons.

CHAPTER FOUR

Willie was sitting in his room chewing a pen and swearing. He had never been much at this correspondence business, and the torn paper which littered the desk and the floor showed that he was now beginning about the seventeenth draft of the note to Mary Grayle.

'George,' he said to the terrior which was watching him solemnly, 'How would you tell a nice girl you didn't like her any more? Never did such a thing in your life? Well, neither have I. But it's got to be done, old feller. Dorothy expects every man to do his duty, sir.'

'Dearest Mary' he wrote, and then considered it. "Too affectionate,' he said and added that sheet to the collection on the floor. 'George, you're no more help than a human being.' George barked nervously and jumped up on the window-sill, looking eagerly out of the window. As a matter of fact he was interested in the nondescript individual who was loafing on the sidewalk opposite, but Willie took it for a suggestion.

'Great work,' he said, scratching George's ears, 'Why not?' Go and meet her accidentally in the street. Nothing wrong with it. Apt to happen to anybody.'

He flung down the pen and galloped down stairs. Once again his ability to make quick decisions was getting him into trouble without necessary delay. For, as he left the house and started briskly down the street, the nondescript individual turned and followed along, some 30 yards behind. It was not the first time that Mr. Hope had had occasion to make use of Masterton's Private Detective Agency.

He was just in time to see the crowds pouring out of the Empress Theatre after the matinee. He posted himself outside a shop-window some fifty yards away from the stage door and when Mary appeared, going to her car, he almost bumped into her. He would have, in fact, if he had not bumped into the nondescript individual instead.

'Willie dear, she cried, 'what a devine surprise. Jump in. We'll have tea at my place.'

'Can't,' said Willie. 'I have got to talk to you now.'

Mary looked at him in bewilderment. Several street-urchins had recognized her, and several adults, and a little crowd was gathering and staring.

'My dear,' she said, 'I can not hang about streets and talk. Get in. Do not be silly.' She moved him into the car and they rolled away. Close behind them came the nondescript individual in a taxi.

Willie was miserable and said nothing all the way. Not until they were settled down in the cozy living room of Mary's apartment could he raise enough of his lost courage to stammer:

'I have—I have come to say goodbye.'

The nondescript individual, having run them to ground, was speeding toward Mr. Hope and his reward. His client listened, grunted his satisfaction and then rang for the butler.

'Tell Fiss Dorothy I wish to speak with her here,' he said. Dorothy came, still a little agitated from her interview with her father. She could not endure another scene so soon. Old Hope beamed at her in triumph.

'You told me, young lady,' he said, 'that young Hale had promised you never to see that Crayle woman again?'

'Yes,' said Dorothy, chin up, wondering who this stranger might be.

'He is with her now,' said the linoleum king. 'This man just followed them to her flat from the theatre.'

'He is lying,' Dorothy cried. 'You have paid him to say that.'

'Sorry, miss,' said the detective, 'They are there safe and sound. You ring up the flat and see.' He produced a worn note book and delivered into it for a moment. 'Mayfair 2133,' he said. 'You will get him.'

Mary Crayle's pink telephone rang. Mary turned her tear stained face toward Willie.

'You answer it,' she said, 'I am too upset. I couldn't talk to anyone now.'

And Willie picked up the instrument.

'Yes? Who is it?' His face went white and he clutched at the table.

'Dorothy,' he shouted, 'Dorothy, wait.'

'You are there,' said Dorothy, at the other end, 'They told me you were.'

'But I can explain—'

'I have no doubt you can,' she said frigidly, 'Please come round here at once. I do not want explanations—but I do want to see you.'

She hung up the telephone, looked at her father's triumphant sneering face and broke into tears. He came and patted her on the shoulder, motioning the detective to go away.

'Don't take it so hard, dear,' he said to her. 'You should have listened to me; that's all.'

Suddenly she stopped crying, and looked at him fixedly.

'Father, will you put five thousand pounds in my account? Right away?'

'Yes. Of course. But what for?'

Dorothy shrugged her shoulders. 'It's very little compared to what I might have had to pay,' she said. 'Please—I want to be alone till he comes.'

Mr. Hope tiptoed away. He was highly pleased with himself.

'I know you are angry with me—disappointed—hurt—' Willie was saying, 'but it just happened that way. All accident.' His voice died away and he stood staring at Dorothy in a sort of mental paralysis. She regarded him steadily, her eyes narrowed; only her foot tapping on the floor betrayed her agitation.

'Go on,' she said.

'For heaven's sake,' Willie cried angrily, 'do not look at me as though I was trying to sell you a gramiphone.'

This time she said nothing, but her lips grew tighter.

'But don't you realize the bad luck of it all? I only went to—'

'To see that woman, having promised me you wouldn't.'

'Will you believe me if I tell you why I went?'

'I know,' said Dorothy quietly, 'because you are in love with her.' Suddenly she flashed out at him. 'Why not have the courage to ask for money? Why cheat to get it?'

Willie's face was now as set and hard as hers.

'Are you seriously suggesting that I wanted your money?'

'What else did you want?' She picked up a slip of paper from the table and handed it to him. 'There,' she said, 'is my check for five thousand pounds.'

Willie took it and inspected it in a daze. He was sure he was going mad in a minute.

'What's this for?' he asked stupidly.

'I believe one should pay for experience,' said Dorothy, 'You are an expert in teaching and possibly this is underpaying you.'

Willie understood.

'Did you treat the archduke as generously?' he asked.

Dorothy's eyes flashed. She was very near the end of her self-control.

'He would have been insulted by such an offer,' she said.

'No doubt, no doubt,' said Willie, nodding. He still looked at the check. For a wild moment she hoped he would tear it up, throw it in her face and then take her in his arms. But he merely folded it with great care and tucked it in a pocket.

'It's not much,' he said, 'but times are bad for us all and one must be grateful for what one can get.' His eyes met hers, and she had a difficult time looking at him squarely. 'Thank you,' he said, 'Good afternoon and goodbye. This should go a long way in New Zealand.'

Without even a not he turned and walked out of the room. She stood it until he had disappeared, and then rushed after him. But there was nothing but the slam of the door down stairs to indicate that he had ever been here.

CHAPTER FIVE

The bank-teller looked at him curiously when he presented the check. Discretion was his long suit, and he would never tell anybody, but Lord Leeland's worthless son cashing a check drawn by old Hope's daughter was an intriguing spectacle to say the least. It was the first time, so far as he knew, that any woman had ever supplied the youngster with money.

'How will you have it, sir?' he asked mechanically.

'In thousand-pound notes,' said Willie, and stuffed them in his pocket. It was the last time he would ever see this bank and he thought with melancholy of the number and size of those checks of his father's which he had cashed there.

Now he wanted a drink badly and went straight to his club. He was discussing a whiskey-and-soda in great gulps when an acquaintance strolled up.

'ullo, young Hale. Enjoy yourself last night?'

Willie turned a glassy stare on him.

"Could you use a thousand pounds?' he asked.

'Well, rather,' said the man, 'What's the—'

Willie produced his sheaf of notes and spread them out on the table like a handof cards.

'Take the one you think is prettiest,' he said.

'You are in a state for this time of day,' said the man uneasily.

'And now,' said Willie, 'if you could recommend me to some worthy charity—a vulgar one preferred, such as red flannels for the poor—I will give them the lot.'

'Whom have you been robbing?' the man asked, trying to laugh off his uneasiness.

'No one,' said Willie, 'They robbed me—the notes, I mean. Name your charity and they'll have them in five minutes.'

The archduke Paul appeared in the other end of the bar, saw Willie and went out again. Willie's acquaintance grinned.

'I don't know how worthy it is,' he said, 'but there's a man who is an object of charity right enough. His creditors lay quiet as long as the Hope match was going through, but now that is off, they're raising the devil with him. I am told he hasn't the money for a square meal. And a good thing too. I loathe the blighter.' He looked up from his drink and saw Willie already half-way across the room. 'Blutto,' he said, shaking his head. 'I will lay ten to one he is in the papers tomorrow morning.'

In five minutes Willie was in a telegraph office. He hastily scribbled 'With Dorothy Hope's compliments' on a sheet of paper, slipped it and the bank notes into an envelope, and addressed it carefully to the archduke at the Albermarle Club. Then he requested to see the messenger boy who would deliver it.

'Old son,' he said to the messenger, 'This is important. If you do not deliver it to the gentleman it is addressed o—and no one else—I will slit your throat and devour you piecemeal. And when he's got it, run like a hare. Don't give him a moment to ask questions. Here—'a bank-note changd hands out of the twenty-five hundred—'Refresh your memory with this.'

'Blimey, governor,' said the boy. 'You ain't 'arf drunk, are you?

'I am not,' said Willie, 'But if you don't do this job properly, you will wish you were dead. Run.' The boy ran. He was the third person that day who had diagnosed the Honorable William Hale as stark staring mad.

Mr. Hope looked at his daughter across the dinner table.

'Well,' he said, 'your friend Hale cashed your check this afternoon. Then he went to his club, then to a telegraph office and then to book passage for New Zealand—for two.' Dorothy said nothing, but gazed into her soup.

'For two, mind you,' said Mr. Hope, 'The fool detective said something about the second passage being for a dog, but that's probably his perverted sense of humor. It is obvious they are going away together, he and the Crayle woman.'

Still Dorothy said nothing. The butler came with a salver containing a note for her. It was in the archduke's handwriting. She frowned, flapped it down by her plate, and then decided to open it. As she read her face grew bewildered; then it flushed a deep red, and she broke her silence.

'I—I can not understand this at all,' she said, 'it is from Paul—but—'

The linoleum king was delighted.

'Paul? What does he say?'

Dorothy tossed it over to him with a hopeless gesture. Her father looked at the letter:

'Dearest Dorothy:

Your charming thought I will forever treasure. Your sympathetic undestanding of my difficulties has touched me, you never will know how much. Through your kindness in sending me five thousand pounds, I am able to leave for home tonight via Paris. Will you please be assured I shall never forget your thoughtfulness.

kiss your hands, Paul.'

'The rat,' roared Mr. Hope.

'What does it mean?' Dorothy asked wearily.

'Mean? It means that villian Hale cashed your cheque and sent the money to Paul in your name. The swine. I will have him prosecuted for that. I'll—'But his daughter was rocking to and fro in her chair and screaming with laughter. 'What's the matter with you?' shouted her father. 'Stop that nonsense.'

'How divine of him,' she said.

'And the idiot accepted them,' Mr. Houe went on grumbling, 'Took money from a woman. What's the world coming to?'

'I wonder if Willie really is taking her with him to New Zealand,' said Dorothy thoughtfully. 'He owns a dog, you know.'

'I will never believe in anything again if he doesn't,' said Mr. Hope. 'Here—where are you going? Aren't you going to have any dinner?'

'I'm going to Lord Leeland's and do a little groveling,' said Dorothy firmly, 'I'm going to crawl after him on my hands and knees till he promises to take me with him.' She said not look back as she left the room; but her father heard one last burst of merriment out of her before she was gone.

There were difficulties about packing, Willie discovered. For one thing his father and his sister came and argued with him about the New Zealand project, and it was distracting.

'Well,' said Lord Leeland, 'what the devil are you going to New Zealand for?'

'Because it's near Australia if I ever want to go there,' said Willie, emptying another drawer on the floor.

'You'll only come another cropper,' said his lordship, 'and you can't look for any more money out of me, you know. If you leave this house, I have washed my hands of you.'

'Two years ago, you practically threw me out of it,' said Willie, 'Why not be consistent?'

'But Willie,' said Susan pleadingly, 'father's getting old new—'

'I am not,' said Lord Leeland. 'There is enough of that. I want you round here because you gave me the best tip on a horse I ever had in my life yesterdty.'

'I'm going to New Zealand,' said Willie, glaring at them. 'If you will both keep quiet and let me pack I will send you a sheep apiece every Christmas.'

'Very well. You can go to the devil,' said Lord Leeland.

'I'm tired of going so often,' said Willie peevishly. There was a knock on the door. 'I suppose that's Arthur to add his bit to the general glee,' he said and bawled: 'Come in.'

But Dorothy stood on the threshold, regarding them cheerfully.

'Dorothy,' shouted his lordship, 'The very person. This young pup's going to New Zealand. Can you do anything about it?' But Susan had him by the sleeve.

'I want to show you the housekeeping books, father,' she told him urgently and dragged him protesting toward the door.

Willie paid no attention to the lady. She went and sat calmly on the bed, watched his difficulties with his dress shirts and a small suit case, and made friends with George. George it was obvious, took to her immensely.

'You are sitting on my pajamas,' said Willie finally. 'I want to pack them.' She arose and he removed the pajamas.

'Aren't you curious about why I am here?' she asked.

'I am,' he said. 'May I ask what you are doing here? Not that it matters much—'

'I've come to tell you I have forgiven you,' she said sweetly.

He dropped the pajamas in a multi colored head and gasped at her.

'You—you've forgiven me,' he yelled, outraged.

'Yes,' she smiled at him happily. 'Don't you think it is sweet of me?'

'Leave my dog alone,' he roared at her. 'You'll be getting him into some kind of trouble directly.'

Obediently she left George alone and came over to stand provokingly close to him.

'What are you going to do when you get to New Zealand, Willie dear? she asked him.

'Get married,' he growled at her, 'and do not call me dear.'

Dorothy shook her head.

'That won't do,' she said. 'Father is old-fashioned. He'd insist on our getting married before we went.'

He took her by the chin.

'Do you imagine I would marry you after the way you insulted me?'

'You'd be an awful fool if you did not,' she told him, She reached up and patted his cheek. 'I'm pretty,' she said, 'and companionable and you've told me yourself I am a tramp at heart—just suited to be a poor man's wife. Kiss me, Willie.'

'Leave me alone,' he shouted. 'After the way you have behaved.'

'Oh, shut up about the way I have behaved. Think of your own past. I was hurt, jealous, miserable—and if ever you do anthing like that again, I'll smash a bottle over your head.'

He turned to her eagerly

'Would you?'

'I would.'

He beamed on her in a perfect rapture.

'I've been ten years looking for a girl like you,' he said. And he obeyed orders and kissed her thoroughly and with emphasis.

A knock sounded on the door, and Lord Leeland stuck in his head.

'That ope feller's down stairs,' he said. 'Wants to lend you the money for a farm in England.' Then he roared with laughter.

'Well what is there to laugh at in that?' Willie asked him, unwillingly letting Dorothy slide out of his arms.

'Well, it will be his furniture you sell and not mine when you go broke next time. That's relief,' said his lordship.

'What a horrid thing to say about my little Willie,' she said. And kissed her again.

'Bless you, my children,' said his lordship and shut the door.

ENGINEER GAVE UP

Says He Could Not Stand Indigestion Any Longer.—Relieved By Black-Draught.

Pulaski, Va.—How a railroad engineer was relieved of indigestion was described by Mr. C. K. Nelson, a Fourth Street resident of this city. Mr. Nelson said:

"I was suffering from stomach trouble in 1917, and had been suffering for some time. I had a tightness in my chest, a shortness of breath. There seemed to be a heavy weight in the pit of my stomach, and quite a bit of nausea, yet I couldn't vomit. I tried different remedies, yet suffered on just the same. When in West Virginia, on a work train, I was in such a condition that I just gave up and came home. I couldn't stand to work, in my condition.

"Some one told me about Black-Draught. I started taking it in small doses after meals. It helped me, and I went back to work.

"One morning while on my engine I felt like I would smother. I stopped in a little town, bought a package of Black-Draught, took a dose and later in the day took another dose. It relieved me and I have not had a bad spell like that in more than two and a half years."

LOVE SHOWER FOR MISS MOLLIE MOORE

A beautiful love shower was bestowed on Miss Mollie Moore Sunday just before the morning services by the Wesley Bible Class and other friends of the Methodist Sunday School.

Rev. C. A. Lehmberg, pastor was the pleasing representative of the class when he asked Miss Moore to please step to the front of the pulpit. With words of commendation and appreciation, voiced by the class and friends for her beauiful devotion and untiring work for the church and especially for Miss Mollie's work in decorating the church so artistically for Easter morning services and the Easter cantata that evening, presented her with a small decorated box. This came as a complete surprise to Miss Moore, who gracefully received it and thanked the gives in her own sweet, sincere manner. Opening the box after returning home she found a dainty gift, and a contribution to be used by the receiver as she wishes.

Miss Moore has been a worker in the Methodist church her entire life and holds the esteem and love of its members and scores of friends in other denominations. She has missed but a few Sundays in years bringing flowers to the church, so long that the congregation depends on her exquisite taste to beautify the building for all occasions.

The groom is the son of Robert Boykin of Cameron and is a graduate of Yoe high school. He left that fall for A. & M. College where he graduated as electrical engineer. In 1929 left for St. Louis to take up work with the American Telephone and Telegraph Company and was transferred to Dallas in January 1930.

The Herald extends its best wishes to the happy couple.

MISS GERALDINE SLAUGHTER RECEIVES ANOTHER HONOR

Miss Geradine Slaughter, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugo Slaughter who is a sophomore at State University, has again been honored at school. While president of Grace Hall, Secretary of her class, was last week elected to secretary of Sidney Lanier Liteary Society. This honor comes only through scholastic rating. She was in the beauty parade Friday evening along with 84 other girls with their escorts, which was held at the new gymnasium in Austin.

DELIGHTFUL AFTERNOON

The beautiful home of Mrs. Oxsheer Smith on North Jackson Street was the scene of a gathering of lovely women in pretty spring attire on Friday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

Six tables of players gathered for this delightful hospitality. Roses were in attractive arrangement about the rooms and game appointments further lent beauty.

At the conclusion of the games high score was made by Mrs. Giles Avriett, who received a box of stationery. Second high was made by Miss Catherine Flinn and was presented with a novelty pin tray. Consolation fell to Mrs. W. E. Gaither, a darning set.

Out of town people present were Mrs. Conn Isaacs of Rockdale and Mrs. Vernon McIntyre of Alpine.

A tempting repast was served following the games.

SENIOR LEAGUE PARTY

About 35 members of the Senior League and friends of the Methodist church enjoyed a tacky party Friday evening in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dryer on North Houston St.

There were a number of laughable costumes worn. Owen Weems was declared to be the tackiest of the men and Ann Graham was pronounced the tackiest of the ladies.

Outdoor games were enjoyed for a season, later refreshments consisting of Bologna sandwiches, onions, blow-gum and lemonade were passed.

Rev. and Mrs. C. A. Lehmberg lent dignity to the occasion.

FORTY-TWO CLUB

Mrs. Oxsheer Smith was hostess to the 42 Club Thursday afternoon at 3:30 at her home on North Jackson Street.

Handsome roses were favored for decorations in bowls and vases thruout the reception room. Four tables for games were attractively fitted in accessories that carried out the idea of 'Believe It Or Not.' Progressive games afforded much pleasure, followed with 'fake refreshments.'

Out of town guest was Mrs. Vernon McIntyre of Alpine.

TUESDAY BRIDGE CLUB

Members of the Tuesday Bridge Club were delighted to have Mrs. Albert Triggs as hostess Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Triggs has recently moved back to Cameron from Graham. Mrs. Triggs had been a beloved member of social and club circles of our city before leaving several years ago.

Handsome roses added beauty to the reception rooms where four tables were placed for games.

After a delightful tilt of games, Mrs. Arthur Kruse made high score for club members and Mrs. Oxsheer Smith for guests.

Out of town guests were Mrs. V. McIntyre of Alpine and Mrs. Hamilton Bonnet of Evanston, Ill., both former Cameron girls.

MISSIONARY SOCIETY

P-J-G PICNIC

On last Saturday Hardin Pollard the District Agent for the Cutis Publishing Company, took his P-J-G Salesmen out to Buell's Ranch for an all day picnic. This picnic was given the boys as a reward for their success in selling the April issue of the Ladies Home Jounal and a good time was had by all.

Hardin has worked up quite an interest among his boy salesman and reports an increase in the sale of his publications.

Mrs. H. C. Watson of Waco was a pleasant house guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Henderson, last week. Dr. Watson came down for a visit Saturday and was accompanied home by his wife Sunday.

Embassy Captive Saved by Message in Bread

It was hardly surprising to find that the Soviet ambassador to France issued a prompt denial of the story that three of his fellow countrymen were being held captive in the Russian embassy, but something of this kind really did happen in London once, writes a columnist in the Manchester Guardian. Lord Alverstone tells about it in his "Reminiscences." In the mews at the back of the Chinese embassy in Portland place, a piece of bread was picked up, appropriately enough, by a baker, and inside it was a note addressed to a certain Chinese resident in London. The note stated that the writer had been about to pass the embassy in the company of two of his fellow countrymen when he had been bustled inside, and that he was now a prisoner in an attic in the building and feared that something worse was going to befall him.

The foreign office was not at all pleased to be confronted with such a delicate situation, but the attorney general was quite positive that diplomatic privileges did not include liberty to incarcerate anybody in an embassy, and, an intimation to that effect being gently conveyed to the ambassador, the prisoner was released. There is room for speculation how far the course of history might have been altered if that bit of bread with its message had not been picked up, for the writer of it was the Sun Yat Sen who a dozen years later became first president of the Chinese republic.

Remarkable Low Note on Australian Organ

On the great organ in Sydney town hall, Australia, is a pedal stop of 64 feet. The pipe actually of that length, the lowest C, does not stand upright, but is bent in several places, so that it may be accommodated in the interior of the instrument. The note this giant pipe emits—the stop is a reed stop, a "contra-posaune"—is fearsome. It is more like a cavernous growl than a musical note, and one of the little jokes of the tuner when he is showing visitors through the great army of pipes in this organ is to have the famous 64-foot pedal pipe sounded when the visitor is alongside it and not expecting the shock. It is an unfailing surprise. The vibrations of this low C can almost be counted—in which regard, no doubt, the note resembles that of the basso-profundo whose boast it was that he had always to begin to sing his lowest note 32 beats before it was needed, since it took so long to become audible to the listener!

Lizard Teaches Lesson

Chuckwallas are gentle and easily handled, and make interesting pets if captured and kept in comfortable quarters with a satisfactory food supply. We know too little of the habits of even our common wild neighbors, and these dwellers in the desert could teach us many things that we do not understand, says Nature Magazine. For instance, if we could eliminate the waste of our bodies by means of dry uric acid instead of by drinking quantities of water, it would be very convenient at times, and we might go for months without drinking water. Apparently none of the cold-blooded reptiles suffer from the heat, and many thrive in the hottest parts of our low desert valleys, basking on rocks so hot that one can hardly bear to touch them with the naked hand.

Siam's National Flower

The chrysanthemum, regent of oriental gardens, but comparatively new in the Occident, is about to have its one thousand six hundredth birthday. Following its arrival in Japan and China from Korea in the early 300's, the little pompon was immediately adopted by oriental royalty. The chrysanthemum still remains the national flower of Siam. In Japan the 16-petaled flower adorns the emperor's crest. The star and collar, emblem of the Imperial Order of the Chrysanthemum, is the choicest decoration the emperor of Japan can bestow and is seldom found on the breast of any save royalty.

Sell "One"

The advertising manager of a certain company was endeavoring to sell his plan to the board of directors. When he saw that it would be almost impossible to do so, he made this remark: "It is not necessary for me to go into the details of the complexities of this sound advertising plan with one member of this board, because this intelligent man understands advertising well. I would, however, like to confer with him immediately after this meeting." When the meeting was adjourned, every member remained in his seat.—American Mutual Magazine.

Boys on Parade

As in the case of the college student, it takes but little to start the New York street urchin off on a parade. He finds a long pole, or even a discarded and dilapidated broom, which will do for a flagpole. He and his companions seize on a pile of celery stalks thrown out by a grocer; these are carried as swords or muskets, and the line of youngsters perhaps half a dozen in all, march proudly up the street to the badly sung tune of "The Maine Stein Song."

Husbands and Wives

The man who tells you that he never had an unpleasantness with his wife is a liar—or a dud.—American Magazine.

New Handy Cash Policies

Handy Cash Policies pay $350.00 in event of a natural death and $500.00 in event of accidental death.

Attached to each policy is a draft for $250.00 which can be cashed at any bank immediately.

Handy Cash Policies are standard life insurance contracts, being issued on the ordinary life plan (age 10 to 65) and the twenty pay life plan (age one day to 60 years). Like all standard contracts, Handy Cash Policies carry 'cash' and paid up options. These values increase each year and serve as a sinking fund for any emergency.

Handy Cash Policies provide that the premium deposit shall be made annually in advance. On the ordinary life plan at age of 10 the annual premium is $5.03. This premium remains the same thruout the life of the contract.

The cost of one of these little, new copyrighted Handy Cash Policies is so pitifully small that no member of any family can sensibly afford to be without one to meet emergency in case of death.

This copyrighted Handy Cash Policy is designed specifically for the purpose of providing ready cash with which to meet the many expenses that accompany the closing of life's last chapter.
